David, 1988-09-02 David takes as his point of departure the orthodox rational paradigm of public policy making which he argues does not adequately reflect real world process to present an integrated model for economic policy formulation and execution By juxtaposing the theoretical foundations of the rationalist model with insights drawn from alternative systems of political economy he shows how economic decisionmaking is both more complex and less idealistic than the rational paradigm assumes In constructing his argument David systematically integrates ideas drawn from moral philosophy politics sociology systems theory institutional and neo Marxian economic thought and international dimensions of political economy He suggests a reorientation of theory and analysis based on an approach emphasizing the role of values conflicts power and divergent interests in the decisionmaking process Focusing throughout on questions raised by the rationalist model David builds his analysis around issues such as the validity of the dominant theories of public economic decision making the logical vis a vis ideological foundations of economic policy postulates the extent to which decisions can be made more responsive to values pertaining to human development Ibss:

Development as Environmental Harm James Heydon,2019-04-01 In this in depth analysis of First Nations opposition to the oil sands industry James Heydon offers detailed empirical insight into Canadian oil sands regulation The environmental consequences of the oil sands industry have been thoroughly explored by scholars from a variety of disciplines However less well understood is how and why the provincial energy regulator has repeatedly sanctioned such a harmful pattern of production for almost two decades This research monograph addresses that shortcoming Drawing from interviews with government industry and First Nation personnel along with an analysis of almost 20 years of policy strategy and regulatory approval documents Sustainable Development as Environmental Harm offers detailed empirical insight into Canadian oil

sands regulation Providing a thorough account of the ways in which the regulatory process has prioritised economic interests over the land based cultural interests of First Nations it addresses a gap in the literature by explaining how environmental harm has been systematically produced over time by a regulatory process tasked with the pursuit of sustainable development With an approach emphasizing the importance of understanding how and why the regulatory process has been able to circumvent various protections for the entire duration in which the contemporary oil sands industry has existed this work complements existing literature and provides a platform from which future investigations into environmental harm may be conducted It is essential reading for those with an interest in green criminology environmental harm indigenous rights and regulatory controls relating to fossil fuel production Journal of Economic Literature ,1989 China's Economic Transition, 1978-2000 -- an Alternative Institutional Analysis Stanley Zhao-xiong Yang,2002
