Handbook of Parenting Marc H. Bornstein, 2019-03-08. This highly anticipated third edition of the Handbook of Parenting brings together an array of field-leading experts who have worked in different ways toward understanding the many diverse aspects of parenting. Contributors to the Handbook look to the most recent research and thinking to shed light on topics every parent, professional, and policymaker wonders about. Parenting is a perennially hot topic. After all, everyone who has ever lived has been parented, and the vast majority of people become parents themselves. No wonder bookstores, house shelves, and how-to parenting books and magazine racks in pharmacies and airports overflow with periodicals that feature parenting advice. However, almost none of these is evidence based. The Handbook of Parenting is Period. Each chapter has been written to be read and absorbed in a single sitting and includes historical considerations of the topic, a discussion of central issues and theory, a review of classical and modern research, and forecasts of future directions of theory and research. Together, the five volumes in the Handbook cover Children and Parenting, the Biology and Ecology of Parenting, Being and Becoming a Parent, Social Conditions and Applied Parenting, and the Practice of Parenting. Volume 1, Children and Parenting, considers parenthood as a functional status in the life cycle. Parents protect, nurture, and teach their progeny, even if human development is more dynamic than can be determined by parental caregiving alone. Volume 1 of the Handbook of Parenting begins with chapters concerned with how children influence parenting. Notable are their more obvious characteristics like child age or developmental stage, but subtler ones like child gender, physical state, temperament, mental ability, and other individual differences. Factors are also instrumental. The chapters in Part I on Parenting across the Lifespan discuss the unique rewards and special demands of parenting children of different ages and stages: infants, toddlers, youngsters in middle childhood, and adolescents, as well as the modern notion of parent-child relationships in emerging adulthood, adulthood, and old age. The chapters in Part II on Parenting Children of Varying Status discuss common issues associated with parenting children of different genders and temperaments, as well as unique situations of parenting adopted and foster children and children with a variety of special needs, such as those with extreme talent, born preterm, who are socially withdrawn or aggressive, or who fall on the autistic spectrum, manifest intellectual disabilities, or suffer a chronic health condition.

Parenting Matters National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine, Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Board on Children, Youth, and Families, Committee on Supporting the Parents of Young Children, 2016-12-21. Decades of research have demonstrated that the parent-child dyad and the environment of the family, which includes all primary caregivers, are at the foundation of children's well-being and healthy development. From birth, children are learning and rely on parents and the other caregivers in their lives to protect and care for them. The impact of parents may never be greater than during the earliest years of life, when a child's brain is rapidly developing and when nearly all of her or his experiences are created and shaped by parents and the family environment. Parents help children build and refine their knowledge and skills, charting a trajectory for their health and well-being during childhood and beyond. The experience of parenting also impacts parents themselves. For instance, parenting can enrich and give focus to parents' lives, generate stress or calm, and create any number of emotions, including feelings of happiness, sadness, fulfillment, and anger. Parenting of young children today takes place in the context of significant ongoing developments. These include a rapidly growing body of science on early childhood, increases in funding for programs and services for families, changing demographics of the U.S. population, and greater diversity of family structure. Additionally, parenting is increasingly being shaped by technology and increased access to information about parenting.

Parenting Matters identifies parenting knowledge attitudes and practices associated with positive developmental outcomes in children ages 0-8 universal preventive and targeted strategies used in a variety of settings that have been effective with parents of young children and that support the identified knowledge attitudes and practices and barriers to and facilitators for parents use of practices that lead to healthy child outcomes as well as their participation in effective programs and services This report makes recommendations directed at an array of stakeholders for promoting the wide scale adoption of effective programs and services for parents and on areas that warrant further research to inform policy and practice It is meant to serve as a roadmap for the future of parenting policy research and practice in the United States

The Power of Positive Parenting Matthew R. Sanders, Trevor G. Mazzucchelli, 2018 Safe nurturing and positive parent child interactions lay the foundations for healthy child development How children are raised in their early years and beyond affects many different aspects of their lives including brain development language social skills emotional regulation mental and physical health health risk behavior and the capacity to cope with a spectrum of major life events As such parenting is the most important potentially modifiable target of preventive intervention The Power of Positive Parenting provides an in depth description of Triple P one of the most extensively studied parenting programs in the world backed by more than 30 years of ongoing research Triple P has its origins in social learning theory and the principles of behavior cognitive and affective change and its aim is to prevent severe behavioral emotional and developmental problems in children and adolescents by enhancing the knowledge skills and confidence of parents Triple P incorporates five levels of intervention on a tiered continuum of increasing strength for parents of children from birth to age 16 The programs comprising the Triple P system are designed to create a family friendly environment that better supports parents with a range of programs tailored to their differing needs This volume draws on the editors experience of developing Triple P and chapters address every aspect of the system as well as how it can be applied to a diverse range of child and parent problems in different age groups and cultural contexts
