Coram Deo Caryn D. Riswold,2006-07-01 In order to adequately address the issues of atonement and christology we must understand how it is that we think about the relationship between God and the human being The way in which we understand and interpret the life and death of Jesus and his role within that relationship then impacts our theology of the sacraments particularly the eucharist Further the questions continue to confront and be confronted by my inescapable identity as a Lutheran Christian I use the term inescapable because I find myself working from and with theologies and theologians that are unabashedly critical of patriarchal religious doctrine and paternal theological construction yet I cannot be convinced that the tradition which formed me is irretrievable or irrelevant I am seeking to use Luther as one of my sources but I am working to reinterpret him and offer a more adequate constructive alternative that embodies what is useable in his tradition I find the potential for a liberating message within Christian theology and I find a critical theological resource in Luther from the Introduction that can give substance and direction to religious searching Gabriel Moran is a professor in the Department of Humanities and the Social Sciences at New York University He is widely credited with reshaping the field of religious education in the United States and beyond Moran is author of twenty books on religion and education including Religious Education as a Second Language Both Sides The Story of Revelation and most recently Speaking of Teaching Lessons from History
