Women of the English Nobility and Gentry, 1066-1500 Jennifer Ward, 2013-01-01 While there is increasing interest in the lives of medieval women the documentary evidence for their activities remains little known This book provides a collection of sources for an important and influential group of women in medieval England and examines changes in their role and activities between 1066 and 1500 For most noble and gentry women early marriage led to responsibilities for family and household and in the absence of their husbands for the family estates and retainers. Widowhood enabled them to take control of their affairs and to play an independent part in the local community and sometimes further afield. Although many women's lives followed a conventional pattern, great variety existed within family relationships and individuality can also be seen in religious practices and patronage. Piety could take a number of different forms, whether a woman became a nun, a vowess or a noted philanthropist and benefactor to religious institutions. This volume provides a broad ranging and accessible coverage of the role of noble women in medieval society. It highlights the significant role played by these women within their families, households, estates and communities.

The distinctive contribution Spring makes is to offer an original interpretive framework for examining and understanding the interconnections among education, imperialism and colonialism and the rise of the global economy. He offers a unique comparison of the educational policies of the World Bank, the United Nations, the European Union and the Organization for Economic Development and Cooperation. Additionally, he provides and weaves together important historical and current information on education in the context of the expansion of international capitalism. Much of this information gathered from many diverse sources is otherwise not easily available to readers of this book. In the concluding chapters of the volume, Spring presents a thoughtful analysis and a powerful argument emphasizing the importance of human rights education in a global economy.
