Health Data in the Information Society György Surján, Rolf Engelbrecht, Peter McNair, 2002 MIE 2002 is the XVIIth international conference of the European Federation of Medical Informatics Today mankind builds up the information society enabled by the underlying rapid development in computer technology The significance of the spread of the internet is comparable to the significance of Gutenberg's invention On one hand it both helps dissemination of data and knowledge and sharing of ideas On the other hand the achievements may divide the society as did non literacy deprive many people from knowledge throughout centuries Today millions of people are isolated from an incredibly large amount of information because of computer non literacy and a new elite mastering the information society has appeared However the ease of production and dissemination of information may foster thoughtless communication and has led to a flood of information and disinformation We have to learn how to behave in this new situation in which the dissemination of information at an international level is totally uncontrolled In the area of medical or health informatics these questions are more serious Lack of information false or inadequate information as well as improper interpretation of accurate information may seriously harm patients And the process may go out of control of the physician i e patients can treat themselves just by visiting some health sites on the net Everybody may throw a message in a bottle in information flood and everybody may pick up messages at any time Can we do anything to ensure that all messages are valid Can we guarantee that our messages reach the intended audience Can we secure that content has not changed on its way Do we know that people getting our messages will interpret them correctly Are we able to understand the intention of a sender when we get a message totally out of context These questions build up the framework of MIE2002

HELP: A Dynamic Hospital Information System Gilad J. Kuperman, Reed M. Gardner, T. Allan Pryor, 2013-03-12 This monograph series is intended to provide medical information scientists health care administrators health care providers and computer science professionals with successful examples and experiences of computer applications in health care settings Through the exposition of these computer applications we attempt to show what is effective and efficient and hopefully provide some guidance on the acquisition or design of information systems so that costly mistakes can be avoided The health care industry is currently being pushed and pulled from all directions from the clinical side to increase quality of care from the business side to improve financial stability from the legal and regulatory sides to provide more detailed documentation and in a university environment to provide more data for research and improved opportunities for education Medical information systems sit in the middle of all these demands They are not only asked to provide more better and more timely information but also to interact with and monitor the process of health care itself by providing clinical reminders warnings about adverse drug interactions alerts to questionable treatment alarms for security breaches mail messages workload schedules etc Clearly medical information systems are functionally very rich and demand quick response time and a high level of security They can be classified as very complex systems and from a developer's perspective as risky systems
