screamed right in front of me I leaned forward and spoke glaring into her eyes I came in here looking for my compassion I lost it years ago bit by bit I lost it when I was eight and other kids chased me around the playground for no visible reason and they weren't playing When I started junior high and got beat up in gym class because the rest of the school was white like my grade school When I ran for student congress and had my posters covered with swastikas and KKK symbols And that was before I got out into the world on my own You want to hear about my adult life I paused to catch my breath She backed away from me I've lost more of my compassion every year of my life for every year I can remember until I don't have any more Well it's here but I can't find it She stood speechless in front of me Letting her have it all at once accomplished that much at least Maybe you were in the wrong town she muttered You think I like being like this Hating the memories of my life and not caring what happens to anybody I said I've lost my compassion not my conscience She walked back and put the metal bottle back in its place on the shelf I can find it she said quietly What I've been watching you When you get something for someone you follow the little white light that appears You can see that Of course I can anybody can You think you're special We just can't see our own I figured that out Well so did I I said lamely So I could get your compassion for you Yeah I didn't think she would considering all she'd said Only you have to get what I want first You don't trust me remember She smiled smugly It looked grotesque as though she hadn't smiled in ages I can trust you Because you know that if you don't give me what I want I won't give you your compassion Besides if all goes well your lack of compassion won't make any difference Well yeah I guess so I hadn't considered a deal with another customer before Until now I had just been waiting for the no show proprietor and then had given up even on that Well she demanded still with that weird forced smile Uh yeah okay It was my last chance I glanced around and found her spot of white light behind me on a lower shelf This way She walked next to me watching me carefully as the white light led us down the crowded aisle A large porcelain vase emitted guttural mutterings on an upper shelf as we passed Two small lizards from the Florida corridor and something resembling a T bone steak with legs were drinking at a pool of shiny liquid in the middle of the floor The viscous liquid was oozing slowly out of a cracked green bottle We stepped over it and kept going The light finally stopped on the cork of a long necked blue bottle at the back of a bottom shelf I stopped and looked down at it wondering if this deal had an angle I hadn't figured
