The Poetics of The New American Poetry

Edited by Donald Allen and Warren Tallman

When Donald Allen's anthology The New American Poetry, 1945-1960 was first published in 1960, it came as something of a surprise, for it somehow managed to compress forty-five poets into presence from some four beyond the range of "official" attention. It introduced the new poets of Charles Olson's generation, among them Allen Ginsberg, Robert Duncan, Robert Creeley, Denise Levertov, Lawrence Ferlinghetti, Frank O'Hara, and Michael McClure, to name just a few. There can no longer be any doubt that these poets now form the dominant movement in the second phase of our twentieth-century literature, with a profound influence on the poetic expression of our time.

In this anthology, the editors present a definitive collection of the statements on their own poetics by twenty-five leading poets who, in Warren Tallman's words, "achieve spectacular fulfillment in our century of what Whitman was calling for in his, 'For it is in Whitman that the editors see the brightening of the movement that extends into our day through the work of the poets grouped in the 'New American Poetry.' The common denominator which the editors find in this movement, despite the divergence among the individual poets, is the search 'for new or re-newed writing in hopes of a new or re-newed world.'"

Besides Whitman, the selections include essays by Ezra Pound, Hart Crane, Gertrude Stein, William Carlos Williams, Louis Zukofsky, Charles Olson, Robert Duncan, Robert Creeley, Allen Ginsberg and many others of the post-Olson generation. Together, these statements provide a unique and comprehensive view of the principles formulated by the poets who have shaped America's poetry during the past two decades. Though many statements in this volume are now widely known, they have remained scattered and appear here together for convenient comparison and reference.

Donald Allen is the editor of The New American Poetry, 1945-1960, now recognized as one of the most significant anthologies of modern American verse. He has also edited The Collected Poems of Frank O'Hara and The Collected Poems of Lew Welch. Warren Tallman is a professor in the English Department of the University of British Columbia in Vancouver.

New American Poetry Anthology:

The New American Poetry, 1945-1960 Donald Allen, 1999 Donald Allen's prophetic anthology had an electrifying effect on two generations at least of American poets and readers. More than the repetition of familiar names and ideas that most anthologies seem to be about here was the declaration of a collective intelligent and thoroughly visionary work in progress, the primary example for its time of the anthology as manifesto. Its republication today complete with poems, statements on poetics, and autobiographical projections provides us again with a model of how a contemporary anthology can and should be shaped. In these essentials it remains as fresh and useful a guide as it was in 1960. Jerome Rothenberg, editor of Poems for the Millennium. The New American Poetry is a crucial cultural document central to defining the poetics and the broader cultural dynamics of a particular historical moment. Alan Golding, author of From Outlaw to Classic: Canons in American Poetry.

The New American Poetry 1945-1960 Donald Allen, 1999 The New American Poetry Donald Merriam Allen, University of California Press, 2017 The New American Poetry 1945-1960 Donald Allen, 1999 The New American Poetry John R. Woznicki, 2013-12-24 The New American Poetry Fifty Years Later is a collection of critical essays on Donald Allen's 1960 seminal anthology The New American Poetry, an anthology that Marjorie Perloff once called the fountainhead of radical American poetics. The New American Poetry is referred to in every literary history of post-World War II American poetry. Allen's anthology has reached its fiftieth anniversary, providing a unique time for reflection and reevaluation of this preeminent collection. As we know, Allen's anthology was groundbreaking; it was the first to distribute widely the poetry and theoretical positions of poets such as Charles Olson, Allen Ginsberg, and the Beats, and it was the first to categorize these poets by the schools: Black Mountain, New York School, San Francisco Renaissance, and the Beats, by which they are known today. Over the course of fifty years, this categorization of poets into schools has become one of the major, if not only way that The New American Poetry is remembered or valued. One certain goal of this volume, as one reviewer invites, is to pry The New American Poetry out from the hoary platitudes that have encrusted it. To this point, critics mostly have examined The New American Poetry as an anthology; former treatments of The New American Poetry look at it intently as a whole. Though the almost singularly focused study of its construction and, less often, reception has lent a great deal of documented, highly visible, and debated material in which to consider, we have been left with certain notions about its relevance that have become imbued ultimately in the collective critical consciousness of postmodernity. This volume, however, goes beyond the analysis of construction and reception and achieves something distinctive, extending those former treatments by treading on the paths they create. This volume aims to discover another sense of radical that Perloff articulated, rather than a radical that departs markedly from the usual. We invite consideration of The New American Poetry that is radical in the sense of root, of harboring something fundamental, something inherent, as we uncover and trace further elements correlated with its widespread influence over the last fifty years. The New American Poetry and Cold War Nationalism Stephan

Delbos, 2021-08-20 This book examines Donald M Allen's crucially influential poetry anthology The New American Poetry 1945-1960 from the perspectives of American Cold War nationalism and literary transnationalism considering how the anthology expresses and challenges Cold War norms claiming post war Anglophone poetic innovation for the United States and reflecting the conservative American society of the 1950s Examining the crossroads of politics social life and literature during the Cold War this book puts Allen's anthology into its historical context and reveals how the editor was influenced by the volatile climate of nationalism and politics that pervaded every aspect of American life during the Cold War

Reconsidering the dramatic influence that Allen's anthology has had on the way we think about and anthologize American poetry and recontextualizing The New American Poetry as a document of the Cold War this study not only helps us come to a more accurate understanding of how the anthology came into being but also encourages new ways of thinking about all of Anglophone poetry from the twentieth century and today
