Using Film to Understand Childhood and Practice Sue Aitken,2018-02-08 Using Film to Understand Childhood and Practice is an innovative and lively text which allows complex and challenging issues within childhood studies to be explored using the medium of filmed drama By utilising popular culture this book provides accessible narratives to students and lecturers needing to engage with complex theoretical ideas In exposing theories to tangible situations often from more than one perspective in films readers are helped to identify and recognise how theories about children and childhood can be applied Each chapter uses a specific film to provide the basis for discussion in order to explore and analyse key concepts within childhood studies which include identity social construction families political and biological narratives children s rights and participation A range of international films are used including Charlie and the Chocolate Factory Rabbit Proof Fence The Hunger Games and The Red Balloon First introducing the theoretical perspective to be discussed chapters also include a contextual explanation of the film and list the specific scenes that will be used to guide students through Concluding with discussion questions students are asked to consider how the theories discussed might be translated in to their own experiences of children childhood and practice Not only supporting understanding of core principles and key ideas across any childhood studies degree this book supports students throughout their university career and beyond by engaging with the journey of becoming a graduate as well as discussion of workplace issues and concepts after graduation

Childhood's Domain Robin C. Moore, 2017-12-06 Where do children go and what do they do outdoors How do they evaluate their own environment What are their likes and dislikes What would they like to see added or changed How can the outdoor environment support healthy child development How is the impact of the environment affected by its social and physical characteristics How can its developmental impact be strengthened through public policy These are some of the questions addressed by Childhood's Domain originally published in 1986 in which children as expert research collaborators describe their largely unseen life outdoors On field trips to secret play places around their homes in streets in parks and in places laid waste and abandoned by adult society they reveal both the pleasure and difficulties of play in the city A central concept of the book is a new term terra ludens which represents the accumulated developmental support that each child receives from her or his personal play spaces Terra ludens reflects the degree to which each child acquires an intuitive sense of how the world is by playing with it Field research for the book was conducted in London Stevenage New Town and Stoke on Trent Neighbourhood sites were deliberately chosen to contrast and compare children s reactions to the characteristics of big city new town and old industrial city environments The most interesting experiences were encountered with children in Stoke on Trent Here in former mineral workings functioning as playgrounds equipped with relics from the heyday of the industrial revolution in new open spaces reclaimed from industrial wastelands and in older parks dating from Victorian times children demonstrated the creative possibilities of a landscape of opportunities lacking in the other two sites Even so children in all three sites revealed great ingenuity in making do with whatever resources they could find to create viable play environments for themselves
