Looking At Criminal Law:

The Criminal Law's Person Claes Lernestedt, Matt Matravers, 2022-02-10 The state's use of the threat and imposition of punishments to regulate conduct is thought or at least said by many to be legitimised by the idea that the criminal law's burdens only fall on those who are blameworthy for their conduct. However, the formal concept of blameworthiness needs to be made substantive. This puts various ideas regarding the criminal law's person at the heart of debates about blame, guilt, and responsibility. How is the criminal law's person constructed by whom and with what disciplinary norms? How is it threatened by new knowledge and how do those threats play out amongst the various stakeholders who claim the criminal law's person as theirs? To address these and cognate questions, this volume brings together an international group of academics to engage with the criminal law's person from a range of disciplinary perspectives.

The Boundaries of the Criminal Law R.A. Duff, 2010-11-11 This is the first book of a series on criminalization examining the principles and goals that should guide what kinds of conduct are to be criminalized and the forms that criminalization should take. The first volume studies the scope and boundaries of the criminal law, asking what principled limits might be placed on criminalizing behaviour.

Comparing Tort and Crime Matthew Dyson, 2015-07-02 The fields of tort and crime have much in common in practice, particularly in how they both try to respond to wrongs and regulate future behaviour. Despite this commonality, in fact, fascinating difficulties have hitherto not been resolved about how legal systems co-ordinate or leave wild the border between tort and crime. What is the purpose of tort law and criminal law and how do you tell the difference between them? Do criminal lawyers and civil lawyers reason and argue in the same way? Are the rules on capacity, consent, fault, causation, secondary liability, or defences the same in tort as in crime? How do the rules of procedure operate for each area? Are there points of overlap? When, how, and why do tort and crime interact? This volume systematically answers these and other questions for eight legal systems: England, France, Germany, Sweden, Spain, Scotland, the Netherlands, and Australia.

Making the Modern Criminal Law Lindsay Farmer, 2016 The Criminalization series arose from an interdisciplinary investigation into criminalization, focusing on the principles that might guide decisions about what kinds of conduct should be criminalized and the forms that criminalization should take. Developing a normative theory of criminalization, the series tackles the key questions at the heart of the issue: what principles and goals should guide legislators in deciding what to criminalize? How should criminal wrongs be classified and differentiated? How should law enforcement officials apply the law's specifications of offences? The fifth book in the series offers an historical and conceptual account of the criminal law as it has developed in England and spread to common law jurisdictions around the world. It traces how and why criminal law has come to be accorded with a central role in securing civil order in modernity and justifies who and what should be treated as criminal under the law. Farmer argues that the emergence of the modern state, in which criminal law is recognized as an instrument of government, is a result of the distinct body of rules which have emerged from the modern criminal law.

Structured in two parts the first traces the development of the modern criminal law including jurisdiction codification and responsibility The second part engages in a detailed analysis of the development of specific categories of criminal law focusing on patterns of criminalization in relation to property offences offences against the person sexual offences and civility
