Man Living On A Side Creek And Other Poems:

Man Living on a Side Creek Stephan Torre,1993-11-01 Carefully wrought and passionate Stephan Torre's poetry considers life and work on the edge of wild lands wrestling with one of the central paradoxes of the human condition the drive to change and conquer the very wilderness that is the source of sanctuary and spiritual renewal Wilderness settings permeate Torre's work from Wyoming's flathead Lake to the south central coast of California to the spruce forests and subsistence farms of British Columbia's Frazier River Valley Images evocative of manual labor also abound axle grease wood shavings machinery rusting in abandoned fields as Torre realizes his themes with unprecedented empathy and lyric intensity

Iron Fever & Other Poems Stephan Torre,2003 After early years growing up in Montana and Wisconsin Stephan Torre spent his teen years in Monterey California After college in Berkeley and San Francisco he lived on the Big Sur and Mendocino coasts working as a wood butcher building houses and salvaging redwood logs Torre later went north to settle on a remote homestead in the Canadian Rockies with his wife and two daughters scratching a living from livestock and sawmills Eventually he moved south to Point Reyes California then to the Great Basin high desert where he now lives on a small ranch at the base of the Warner Mountains Given his priority for living in raw and untamed country Torre's poems are seldom without reference to wild landscape He resists however being called a nature poet since he frequently deals with traditional rural male work gender privilege art and the tensions inherent in people's rapacious claims of land ownership
