Parliament: Joint Committee on Privacy and Injunctions,2012-03-27 This report says Parliament should not introduce any new privacy statute It concludes that in weighing the competing rights to privacy and freedom of expression each case must be judged on its own merits The bar for limiting freedom of expression must be set high but the courts are now striking a better balance in dealing with applications for privacy injunctions Criticism that privacy law has been judge made noting that it evolved from the Human Rights Act is rejected The Committee says the most important step towards improving protection of privacy is to provide for enhanced regulation of the media The Press Complaints Commission lacked the power sanctions or independence to be truly effective Substantial changes to press regulation are needed to ensure that it encompasses all major news publishers including in time major bloggers The Committee makes several recommendations including that the reformed regulator should have access to a wider range of sanctions including the power to fine be cost free to complainants be able to determine the size and location of a published apology and the date of publication play a greater role in arbitrating and mediating privacy disputes One possible mechanism the Committee suggests is for advertisers to agree to advertise only in publications that are members of the press regulator and subscribe to its rules It also concludes that parliamentarians should ensure that material subject to an injunction is only revealed in Parliament when there is good reason to do so
