

After a long, hard day of work, the most common sight in the New York City subway is a man with a beard and a goatee, wearing a dark jacket and a white shirt, looking down at his phone. He is not alone. There are many others like him, some with tattoos, some with piercings, some with long hair and beards. They are all part of a new wave of urban warriors, a group of men who are redefining the image of a man in the city.

These men are not just looking for love. They are looking for a place to belong. They are looking for a community where they can be themselves, where they can be strong and confident. They are looking for a place where they can find the love they deserve.
