Russias Food Policies And Globalization:

Russia's Food Policies and Globalization Stephen K. Food Policy and Food Security Stephen K. Wegren, Alexander Nikulin, Irina Trotsuk, 2018-03-28 This book provides a comprehensive analysis of Russian food policy Food policy is defined as the way government policy influences food production and distribution Russia's food policy is important for several reasons The first and most obvious reason is that a dysfunctional food policy is symptomatic of larger political and societal problems A failing food policy is often the precursor to political instability Russian food policy is also important is due to the agricultural recovery since 2004 that has allowed Russia to become self sufficient in grain production Being food sufficient in grain means that Russia is not drawing upon global grain supply Even more important Russia now produces surpluses and has become a global grain supplier Moreover the agricultural recovery has made the country food secure traditionally defined as having enough food for a healthy life An analysis of food policy reveals that the structure of food production has changed with the emergence of mega farms called agroholdings that are horizontally and vertically integrated Agroholdings represent a concentration of capital and land with a small number of farms producing large percentages of total food output The book explores alternatives to the industrial agricultural model by discussing different variants of sustainable agriculture A final importance of Russian food policy concerns food trade Russia has become more protectionist since 2012 The food embargo against Western nations 2014 2017 is one example so too is import substitution that is a core component of food policy The book demonstrates the politicalization of external food trade Food trade and denial of access to the Russian market is used as an instrument of foreign policy to punish countries with whom Russia has disagreements Current Russian policymakers have food resources to augment support and extend national interests abroad Russia historically has cycled through periods of integration and isolation from the West This book raises the question whether a new normal has arisen that is characterized by the permanent withdrawal from integration as evidenced by its nationalist and protectionist food policy The book is entirely original rich in detail and broad in scope It is based on field work survey data a wide reading of primary sources and the secondary literature all of which are linked to important policy questions in development studies and food studies It is destined to become a classic book on Russian food policy

Poverty Effects of Russia's WTO Accession Thomas Fox Rutherford, David G. Tarr, Oleksandr Shepotylo, 2005 Rutherford Tarr and Shepotylo use a computable general

equilibrium comparative static model of the Russian economy to assess the impact of accession to the World Trade Organization WTO on income distribution and the poor Their model is innovative in that they incorporate all 55 000 households from the Russian Household Budget Survey as real households in the model This is accomplished because they develop a new algorithm for solving general equilibrium models with a large number of agents In addition they include foreign direct investment and Dixit Stiglitz endogenous productivity effects in their trade and poverty analysis In the medium term the authors find that virtually all households gain from Russian WTO accession with 99.9 percent of the estimated gains falling within a range between 2 and 25 percent increases in household income They show that their estimates are decisively affected by liberalization of barriers against foreign direct investment in business services sectors and endogenous productivity effects in business services and goods The authors use their integrated model to assess the error associated with a top down approach to micro simulation They find that approximation errors introduced by failing to account for income effects in the conventional sequential approach are very small However data reconciliation between the national accounts and the household budget survey is important to the results Despite the estimated gains for virtually all households in the medium term many households may lose in the short term because of the costs of transition So safety nets are crucial for the poorest members of society during the transition This paper a product of the Trade Team Development Research Group is part of a larger effort in the group to assess the impact of trade on poverty Abstract
