disenfranchisement the practice of restricting electoral rights following criminal conviction is the only surviving electoral restriction of adult mentally competent citizens in contemporary democracies Despite the strong devotion to the principle of universal suffrage criminal offenders are still routinely deprived of active and passive franchise while the justifications for such limitations remain elusive and incoherent In Punishment and Citizenship Milena Tripkovic develops an empirical and normative account of criminal disenfranchisement Starting from historical precedents of such restrictions and examining the current policies of a number of European countries Tripkovic argues that while criminal disenfranchisement is considered a form of punishment it should instead be viewed as a citizenship sanction imposed when a citizen fails to perform their role as a member of a political community In order to determine the justifications of disenfranchisement Tripkovic explores various citizenship ideals and examines whether criminal offenders comply with the expectations that are posed before them After developing a theoretical framework of citizenship duties Tripkovic concludes that very few criminal offenders fail to satisfy fundamental citizenship conditions and exhaustive voting restrictions cannot ultimately be justified A comprehensive assessment of criminal disenfranchisement Punishment and Citizenship offers concrete policy suggestions to determine the limited circumstances under which electoral rights could justifiably be withheld from criminal offenders Spain After Franco
