Anne Sexton was born in Newton, Massachusetts and raised in Weston, Massachusetts. One of the most popular poets of mid-20th century America, Sexton's impressive body of work continues to be widely read and debated by literary scholars and cultural critics alike. According to Diane Hume George, "Anne Sexton's poetry tells stories that are immensely significant to mid-twentieth-century artistic and psychic life. Sexton understood her culture's malaise through her own, and her skill enabled her to deploy metaphorical structures at once synthetic and analytic ... Sexton explored the myths by and through which our culture lives and dies: the archetypal relationships among mothers and daughters, fathers and daughters, mothers and sons, gods and humans, men and women. She perceived, and consistently patterned in the images of her art, the paradoxes deeply rooted in human behavior and motivation. Her poetry presents multiplicity and simplicity, duality and unity, the sacred and the profane, in ways that insist on their similarities—even, at times, their identity. In less abstract terms, Sexton made explicit the intimacy of forces persistently treated as opposites by the society she lived in."

The daughter of a successful businessman, Sexton's childhood was materially comfortable but not happy. Her relationships with her parents were difficult, perhaps even abusive. Sexton's closest confidante was her maiden great-aunt. She attended boarding school and after graduation enrolled in Garland Junior College for one year. Sexton later described Garland as a "finishing" school. At age 19, she married Alfred "Kayo" Sexton II. While Kayo was serving in Korea, Anne became a fashion model. In 1953, she gave birth to her first child and in 1955, her second. Sexton suffered from post-partum depression, and after the birth of her first daughter she suffered her order of the universe an order that provides human reason with a window onto the transcendent For Aristotle and Aquinas the natural order grounds both art and morality and yet it is this very order which has been called into question by modern science and philosophy Instead of pointing us to a suprahuman order the beautiful then points to the order of human freedom and creativity Reflection on the beautiful since the modern philosopher Immanuel Kant has thus often taken a subjectivistic turn Because of the importance of beauty and art in human existence in man's education and life as a moral and political being an alternative should be sought to any reduction of the beautiful to a purely subjective experience or cultural construct The Aristotelian Thomistic tradition in dialogue with modern and contemporary conceptions of the beautiful provides us with just that alternative and thus the essays herein represent a decisive step in the journey for Thomistic aesthetics
