Supercommunity E-Flux, 2017-12-05 Leading artists theorists and writers exhume the dystopian and utopian futures contained within the present I am the supercommunity and you are only starting to recognize me I grew out of something that used to be humanity Some have compared me to angry crowds in public squares others compare me to wind and atmosphere or to software Invited to exhibit at the 56th Venice Biennale e flux journal produced a single issue over a four month span publishing an article a day both online and on site from Venice In essays poems short stories and plays artists and theorists trace the negative collective that is the subject of contemporary life in which art the internet and globalization have shed their utopian guises but persist as naked power in the face of apocalyptic ecological disaster and against the claims of the social commons I convert care to cruelty and cruelty back to care I convert political desires to economic flows and data and then I convert them back again I convert revolutions to revelations I don't want security I want to leave and then disperse myself everywhere and all the time

In Search of the Origin of Original Sin Dissipation Bada Han, Jangyoun Lee, Taehee Oh, 2024-01-26 In this paper we examine how contrary to the original sin hypothesis emerging market economies have gained the ability to borrow abroad in their local currency We empirically analyze the relationship of various economic variables with local currency debt and identify three crucial conditions for the capacity to borrow in local currency institutional quality sufficient depth in the domestic bond market and adequate performance in inflation targeting While shares in JPMorgan Government Bond Index Emerging Markets GBI EM index also appear to be influential the associations with local currency debt is less clear We conduct a similar empirical analysis on portfolio equity which represents a safer form of external liability than foreign currency debt and verify that the depth of the equity market plays a key role in attracting foreign capital to domestic equity markets Finally we propose a simple portfolio model based on the inelastic market hypothesis to explain the positive correlation between capital market depth and the dissipation of original sin which refers to the presence of more external liability in the form of equity or local currency debt In essence our analysis suggests that emerging market economies with reasonably strong fundamentals are not necessarily reliant on foreign currency debt
