and employees want to act in a meaningful way in general The way planning and control is undertaken in an organization is to a large extent dependent on the way a manager interprets information about the organisation Decisions and actions can be traced to the interpretation of a situation in the past and present Since organisations are built on people it is important to try to understand why they act in a certain way and how their understanding of the organisation is evolving Management control has in many ways been described as a function that is dependent on different techniques and methods however it can also be described as a social process focusing on decisions and actions Informations systems have come to play a crucial role in managing an organisation especially when it comes to tracing performance The demand for responsible and accountable management has led to an increased emphasis on meaningful decisions and actions The Author Dr Krister Bredmar is associate professor at Linneaus University in Sweden He has for more then 20 years worked with management control and organisational sense making both in theory and in practice His research has been published both in academic journals and in books Readership Scholars students and practitioners Contents The accounting heritage Corporate epistemology Thinking ahead The essence of management control Understanding performance The control concept in management control Reports communication and stakeholders The essence of sense making Organisations as a set of social relations Information systems and management control Individuals and organisations Organisational structure A social perspective A decisions context Techiques and functions Thinking and acting strategically Accounting tools Information and knowledge The performance paradox

Management Control Systems and Cross-Cultural Research Michael Hanzlick, 2015-01-31 A fundamental challenge that management faces in the twenty first century is how to exercise adequate control i e how to guide and direct the behaviour of their subordinates With increasing globalisation firms witness a cross cultural impact too Of particular interest is the question of whether to use the standardized form of control similar to the home base of firms or whether to adapt their control practices to the local specificities Given the meagre state of the literature in management control with a cross cultural emphasis this study addresses a real world problem namely the question whether management control practices are configured similarly or differently across cultures Relying on a generalized industry sample across four countries Belgium Canada Germany and Poland this study sought to shed light on one of the more intriguing questions does culture matter for specific control areas in particular for performance measurement performance evaluation and reward systems The theoretical foundations are grounded in the cultural framework of the GLOBE project accompanied by thoughts of new institutionalism stakeholder theory and contingency thoughts Hypotheses are tested by mean comparisons ANOVA ANCOVA The empirical findings highlight cultural differences for a broader set of control practices and deliver new insights into the intersection of culture and management control This dissertation crafts a novel topic with high relevance for both researchers and practitioners The study demonstrates areas for which management control practices should be adapted to the local needs and areas for which those practices could be harmonized in the whole company This monograph stresses some areas in which future empirical cross cultural research can benefit and some areas where conceptual thoughts could be advanced
