Walks in & Around London Peter Wenham,2003 This text explores the consequences for language acquisition language evolution and linguistic theory of taking the underlying architecture of the language faculty to be that of a dynamical system The authors investigate whether it is possible for a complex adaptive system to identify the categories structures and rules of a language given access only to instances of grammatical utterances of that language The linguistic tradition says that this is impossible but there is a growing body of literature in psychology and computer science arguing that grammar can be uncovered using purely statistical techniques applied to the distribution of forms in a string of words The book goes on to discuss whether a learner requires information about structure that goes beyond the information that is contained in the meaning Does the learner have to have knowledge of grammar per se prior to language acquisition as has been traditionally assumed

In and Around London - Walks ,1999 The walks in this guide are all within the circumference of the M25 motorway Many people including Londoners themselves may be surprised by how much open attractive and unspoilt countryside still survives in an area that is often thought to comprise little more than sprawling suburbs and congested roads The walks fall into three main categories urban suburban and rural Many of these have an unexpected solitude and tranquillity normally only experienced in remote and thinly populated parts of Britain
