The Evolution of Ceramic Production Organization in a Maya Community Dean E. Arnold, 2015-02-15 In The Evolution of Ceramic Production Organization in a Maya Community Dean E. Arnold continues his unique approach to ceramic ethnoarchaeology tracing the history of potters in Ticul Yucatán and their production space over a period of more than four decades This follow up to his 2008 work Social Change and the Evolution of Ceramic Production and Distribution uses narrative to trace the changes in production personnel and their spatial organization through the changes in production organization in Ticul Although several kinds of production units developed households were the most persistent units of production in spite of massive social change and the reorientation of pottery production to the tourist market Entrepreneurial workshops government sponsored workshops and workshops attached to tourist hotels developed more recently but were short lived whereas pottery making households extended deep into the nineteenth century Through this continuity and change intermittent crafting multi crafting and potters increased management of economic risk also factored into the development of the production organization in Ticul Illustrated with more than 100 images of production units The Evolution of Ceramic Production Organization in a Maya Community is an important contribution to the understanding of ceramic production Scholars with interests in craft specialization craft production and demography as well as specialists in Mesoamerican archaeology anthropology history and economy will find this volume especially useful Griot Potters of the Folona Barbara E. Frank, 2022-02-02 Griot Potters of the Folona reconstructs the past of a particular group of West African women potters using evidence found in their artistry and techniques The potters of the Folona region of southeastern Mali serve a diverse clientele and firing thousands of pots weekly during the height of the dry season Although they identify themselves as Mande the unique styles and types of objects the Folona women make and more importantly the way they form and fire them are fundamentally different from Mande potters to the north and west Through a brilliant comparative analysis of pottery production methods across the region especially how the pots are formed and the way the techniques are taught by mothers to daughters Barbara Frank concludes that the mothers of the potters of the Folora very likely came from the south and east marrying Mande griots West African leatherworkers who are better known as storytellers or musicians as they made their way south in search of clientele as early as the 14th or 15th century CE While the women may have nominally given up their mothers identities through marriage over the generations the potters preserved their maternal heritage through their technological style passing this knowledge on to their daughters and thus transforming the very nature of what it means to be a Mande griot This is a story of resilience and the continuity of cultural heritage in the hands of women
