Postdevelopmental Approaches to Childhood Art Jayne Osgood, Mona Sakr, 2019-03-21 In childhood research children's art making has typically been viewed and understood through a lens of developmental psychology and the notion that children's art making progresses through a linear series of stages continues to dominate how we design and implement art making experiences for young children Postdevelopmental

Approaches to Childhood Art brings together the work of theorists from around the world who have presented postdevelopmental approaches to childhood art thereby playing a vital part in unsettling the dominance of the developmental paradigm and offering worked examples of alternative models Drawing on sociocultural theory Deleuzian philosophy posthumanism and postmodernism each chapter offers a theoretical basis that challenges developmentalism as well as an application of that theoretical basis The contributors also consider what this shift in our perspective means for the design and implementation of art making experiences for young children

On Telling Images of China Shane McCausland, Yin Hwang, 2013-11-01 The essays in this volume address a diverse range of issues in China's narrative art and visual culture mainly from the Ming dynasty 1368 1644 to the present These studies attend to the complex ways in which images circulate in pictorial media and across boundaries between high art and popular culture images in paintings prints stone engravings and posters as well as in film and video art In addition the authors examine the roles of ancient exemplary stories and textual narratives as well as their reiteration in the visual arts in early modern and modern social and political contexts The volume is divided into three sections Representing Paradigms Interpreting Literary Themes and Narratives and the Medium and Modernity While the essays in each section deal with concerns in the field of China's art history an editors introduction serves to position the topic of narrative art and to introduce definitions and genre issues which run through the book As a whole the volume invites reflection on the intrinsic nature of narratives and their pictorial lives and presents new research which challenges established views and paradigms
