Race Ing Masculinity Identity In Contemporary Us Mens Writing:

Race-ing Masculinity John Christopher Cunningham, 2018-10-24 This study explores the intersection of race and gender identity in writings by contemporary American men of color showing how ostensibly sexist or homophobic texts coexist with or are engendered by articulations of anti racism Conversely certain articulations of gender concerns produce reactionary ideas about race The author examines Asian American identity in the works of Frank Chin John Okada and Shawn Hsu Wong contending that these writers exhibit a strong masculinist sexist bias limiting their value for Asian American women and homosexuals The author then looks at the work of African American writer Charles Johnson He examines the conflict between feminism and male supremacy in Johnson s novels tracing the relationship between this vision of gender and the conservatism of Johnson s approach to race issues The author also considers the discourse of perverse sexuality with particular attention to the possibility of a countertradition of the joto or queer in the canon of Chicano novels from Jose Antonio Villareal to Arturo Islas Through an examination of the readings of Richard Rodriguez and Oscar Zeta Acosta Cunningham demonstrates the interplay of homosocial sexual politics with Rodriguez and Acosta s respective conservative and revolutionary approaches to race Finally the study considers how claims about the universality of postmodern experience implicit in Don DeLillo s novel White Noise actually bear the particularizing marks of whiteness and masculinity Includes index and bibliography
