individual's policies or beliefs about the environment represent these patterns. Human judgments are based then upon one's interpretation of available information. They are probability statements about one's environment and how one reacts to it. This condition leads to the human judgment process being inherently limited. It is fundamentally a covert process. It is seldom possible for an individual to accurately describe his or her judgment process accurately. Redefining Security David T. Graham, Nana Poku, 1998-10-30. International migration has become a major domestic political issue in many countries and a major topic of international debate. Thus far most of the attention has centered on the plight of refugees or on ways to curb the flow of illegal immigrants. As more and more migrants cross interstate boundaries, however, governments are realizing that immigration and asylum problems cannot be separated from broader socio-economic and political issues, nor can they be resolved by countries acting unilaterally. Even with this understanding, attempts to develop multilateral strategies to ease international tensions arising from uncontrolled migration will be complicated by economic disparities, regional political tensions, and mounting population and ecological pressures. Internal migration, particularly in terms of forced resettlement and urbanization, also gives rise to a myriad of problems relating to aspects of security. The increase in other major population movements, such as tourism and business travel, also has implications for security. Until recently the question, what is security, was rarely asked in the context of these developments. This was because there was a perceived consensus on what the nature of security was. The nature of security was held to mean national political and military security. Thus security was virtually synonymous with defense. The theoretical claim of this volume is that these developments are necessitating a redefinition of security. This volume provides major theoretical analyses of these trends as well as in-depth case studies that explore specific developments of major concern to scholars and other researchers involved with international relations, migration, and development issues.

The Politics of Equity Finance in Emerging Markets Kathryn C. Lavelle, 2004-10-14. Emerging market stock issuance relative to GDP rose in the late twentieth century to levels that roughly matched that of advanced industrial markets. Nonetheless, the connection between owning shares of emerging market stock and the ability to influence the management of these firms remains fundamentally different from the analogous institutional connection that has evolved in industrial markets. The reasons for the differences in emerging markets are both historical and political in nature. That is, local equity markets have had the objective of providing for some degree of local ownership and control of large economic entities since the late nineteenth century. However, local markets have operated under different global political structures since that time, ranging from imperialism to world wars to sovereign developmental states to neo-liberal states. Shares issued under these different structures have been reconfigured over time, resulting in a lack of convergence along either the Anglo-American or Continental models of corporate governance. The author uses a political science paradigm to explain the growth of emerging equity markets. She departs from conventional economic explanations and examines politics at the micro level of large issues of emerging market stock. The second half of the book presents case studies dealing with emerging market countries in Latin America Asia Russia and Eastern Europe Africa and the Middle East The case studies connect the regional state and firm levels to detail the multiple ownership and control arrangements and to dispel the notion that mere quantitative growth of these markets will lead to a convergence in financial institutional structures along the lines of the industrial core of the world economy

Transatlantic Policymaking in an Age of Austerity Flor Aarts,2004-11-11

Transatlantic Policymaking in an Age of Austerity integrates the study of politics and public policy across a broad spectrum of regulatory and social welfare policies in the United States and several nations of Western Europe The editors and a sterling list of contributors look at policymaking in the 1990s through the present providing a comparative politics framework stressing both parallel development and the differences between and among the nations Similar prevailing ideas and political factors can be identified and transatlantic comparisons made providing for a clearer understanding of the policymaking process Faith in regulated markets and the burden of rising welfare costs are concerns found on both sides of the Atlantic Western democracies also share political climates colored by economic austerity low trust in government pressures from interest groups and a sharply divided electorate Because of differing political processes and differing policy starting points a variety of disparate policy decisions have resulted Real world policymaking in the areas of welfare health labor immigration reform disability rights consumer and environmental regulation administrative reforms and corporate governance are compared Ultimately the last decade is best characterized as one of drift sluggish changes with little real innovation and much default to the private sector In general policymakers on both sides of the ocean constrained by economic necessity have been unable to produce policy outcomes that satisfy the key segments of the electorate The contributors examine the United States Great Britain France and Germany as well as a number of other European countries and study the European Union itself as a policymaking institution Transatlantic Policymaking in an Age of Austerity distills the prominent issues politics and roles played by governmental institutions into a new understanding of the dynamics of policymaking in and among transatlantic nations
