only a snapshot of a moment in time Different populations of the same species can be in different stages in the process of species formation or dissolution In some cases hybridization and introgression can create enormous challenges in interpreting data on genetic distinctions between groups Hybridization is far more common in the evolutionary history of many species than previously recognized As a result the precise taxonomic status of an organism may be highly debated This is the current case with the Mexican gray wolf Canis lupus baileyi and the red wolf Canis rufus and this report assesses the taxonomic status for each

Cellular Automata Bastien Chopard, Marco Tomassini, 2003-06-30 This volume contains the proceedings of the Fifth International Conference on Cellular Automata for Research and Industry ACRI 2002 that was held in Neva on October 9-11 2002 After more modest beginnings in 1994 as a largely Italian conference over the years ACRI has gradually become firmly established as one of the premier conferences in the field of cellular automata in Europe and beyond Although the field of cellular automata is relatively old and established these simple but powerful systems and their newer variations continue to attract the interest of researchers after more than half a century since the seminal work of Ulam and Von Neumann The ACRI series of conferences has the ambition of being an internationally renowned forum for all those interested in the theory and applications of cellular systems The contributions collected in this volume concern cellular automata in various fields such as theory implementations and applications In addition several fields of research e.g. the multi-agent approach adopt methodologies that show strict affinities to cellular automata but without the label Cellular Automata Therefore one of our intentions was to enlarge the cellular automata community to include new related techniques
