

Royal Navy H.M. Submarine Standard Colours of WWII

C02 Black		C03 White		NARN21 507A
NARN22 G45		NARN35 PB10		NARN37 B30

On 12th October 1944, the Admiralty promulgated Confidential Admiralty Fleet Order 2268/44 which introduced the standard camouflage designs familiar to many. Section 6 entitled "Scheme H" provided the first standardised scheme for RN submarines, and introduced the new colour PB10.

Sub-paragraph (c) listed the formula for obtaining colour PB10 as follows:
 AP409 white lead oil paste - 5 lbs
 AP104 zinc oxide oil paste - 20 lbs
 AP89 ultramarine blue oil paste - 24 lbs
 Linseed oil, extra pale, boiled - 6 pints
 AP773 liquid driers - 3 pints
 White spirit - 7 pints

Whilst a sample of PB10 has been offered by Snyder & Short in the past and copied by our competitors, it is not possible to arrive at such a shade using only white and ultramarine pigments as specified in the original documentation. The appearance of this sample may potentially be attributed to age-bleeding of the binder of any original linseed oil paint. We at Sovereign Hobbies reproduced a series of fresh samples with the specified original ingredients and using our modern equipment were able to derive the proportions slightly to arrive at the specified 10% Rf for this colour, with the resultant but distinctive shade being corroborated against contemporary artwork and surviving contemporary models. The challenge has been replicating this very distinctive shade using modern commercial paint tints, but we believe we have achieved a viable model paint shade very close to our target made using the ultramarine pigment. Our new PB10 is, once again, the best Royal Navy model paint on the market.

PB10 created using C&O 2268/44 formula
