Measurement Of American Wealth:

Measuring the Nation's Wealth United States. Congress. Economic Joint Committee, George Washington University. Wealth Inventory Planning Study, 1964 The Measurement of Saving, Investment, and Wealth Robert E. Lipsey, Helen Stone Tice, 2008-04-15 There is probably no concept other than saving for which U S official agencies issue annual estimates that differ by more than a third as they have done for net household saving or for which reputable scholars claim that the correct measure is close to ten times the officially published one Yet despite agreement among economists and policymakers on the importance of this measure huge inconsistencies persist Contributors to this volume investigate ways to improve aggregate and sectoral saving and investment estimates and analyze microdata from recent household wealth surveys They provide analyses of National Income and Product Account NIPA and Flow of Funds measures and of saving and survey based wealth estimates Conceptual and methodological questions are discussed regarding long term trends in the U S wealth inequality age wealth profiles pensions and wealth distribution and biases in inferences about life cycle changes in saving and wealth Some new assessments are offered for investment in human and nonhuman capital the government contribution to national wealth NIPA personal and corporate saving and banking imputation Measuring Trends in U.S. Income Inequality Hang K. Ryu, Daniel J. Slottje, 2012-12-06 This book is the culmination of roughly seven years of joint research between us We have both been interested in income inequality measurement for a considerably longer period of time One author Ryu has a back ground in physics While he was working on his Ph D in Physics at M I T he became acquainted with Robert Solow Professor Solow introduced Ryu to economics After finishing his Ph D in physics Ryu went on to the University of Chicago where Arnold Zellner guided him to a dissertation on using orthonormal basis and maximum entropy as estimation methods in econometric applications The precise definition and examples of orthonormal basis ONB and maximum entropy ME methods will be given in the book As it turns out a natural application of these methods is the study of income distribution Professor Zellner suggested that Ryu look at some of my joint work with Robert Basmann on functional forms of Lorenz curves as one starting place to do his own research Ryu requested some of our data and asked for several of our papers with the express purpose of introducing functional forms of Lorenz curves that Ryu felt would do a better job of approximating the empirical Lorenz curve Thus our first introduction was essentially one of Ryu trying to invent a better mousetrap The interested reader can review the results given in Basmann et al 1990 and Chapter Four of this book to see if Ryu succeeded Handbook of Income Inequality Measurement Jacques Silber, 2012-12-06 Amartya Sen Equality I spoke the word As if a wedding vow Ah but I was so much older then I am younger than that now Thus sang Bob Dylan in 1964 Approbation of equality varies not only with our age though it is not absolutely clear in which direction the values may shift over one's life time but also with the spirit of the times The 1960s were good years for singing in praise of equality The spirit of the present times would probably be better reflected by melodies in admiration of the Federal Reserve System And yet the technical literature on the evaluation and measurement of economic inequality has grown remarkably over the last three decades. Even as actual economic policies especially in North America and Europe have tended to move towards focusing on virtues other than the avoidance of economic inequality, the professional literature on assessing and gauging economic inequality has taken quite a jump forward. A great many different problems have been addressed and effectively sorted out and new problems continue to be posed and analyzed. The Contents A Review Jacques Silber has done a great service to the subject by producing this collection of admirably helpful and illuminating papers on different aspects of the measurement of income inequality. The reach of this collection is quite remarkable. Along with a thorough overview from the editor himself, the major areas in this complex field have been carefully examined and accessibly discussed. The Measure of America

Sarah Burd-Sharps, Kristen Lewis, Eduardo Borges Martins, 2008-07-22. The Measure of America is the first ever human development report for a wealthy developed nation. It introduces the American Human Development Index which provides a single measure of well being for all Americans disaggregated by state and congressional district as well as by gender, race and ethnicity. The Index rankings of the 50 states and 436 congressional districts reveal huge disparities in the health, education and living standards of different groups. Clear, precise, objective and authoritative, this report will become the basis for all serious discussions concerning the realization of a fair, just and globally competitive American society. Measuring Economic Growth and Productivity Barbara Fraumeni, 2019-11-06. Measuring Economic Growth and Productivity Foundations KLEMS Production Models and Extensions presents new insights into the causes, mechanisms and results of growth in national and regional accounts. It demonstrates the versatility and usefulness of the KLEMS databases which generate internationally comparable industry level data on outputs, inputs and productivity. By rethinking economic development beyond existing measurements, the book's contributors align the measurement of growth and productivity to contemporary global challenges, addressing the need for measurements as well as the Gross Domestic Product. All contributors in this foundational volume are recognized experts in their fields, all inspired by the path breaking research of Dale W. Jorgenson.

How's Life in Latin America? Measuring Well-being for Policy Making OECD, 2021-10-28. Many Latin American countries have experienced improvements in income over recent decades, with several of them now classified as high income or upper middle income in terms of conventional metrics. But has this change been mirrored in improvements across the different areas of people's lives? How's Life in Latin America: Measuring Well-being for Policy Making addresses this question by presenting comparative evidence for Latin America and the Caribbean (LAC) with a focus on 11 LAC countries: Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, the Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Mexico, Paraguay, Peru, and Uruguay.

Measuring Distribution and Mobility of Income and Wealth Raj Chetty, John N. Friedman, Barry Johnson, Arthur Kennickell, 2022-11-16. A collection of twenty-three studies that explore the latest developments in the analysis of income and wealth distribution and mobility. Economic research is increasingly focused on inequality in the distribution of personal resources and outcomes One aspect of inequality is mobility are individuals locked into their respective places in this distribution To what extent do circumstances change either over the lifecycle or across generations Research not only measures inequality and mobility but also analyzes the historical economic and social determinants of these outcomes and the effect of public policies This volume explores the latest developments in the analysis of income and wealth distribution and mobility The collection of twenty three studies is divided into five sections The first examines observed patterns of income inequality and shifts in the distribution of earnings and in other factors that contribute to it The next examines wealth inequality including a substantial discussion of the difficulties of defining and measuring wealth The third section presents new evidence on the intergenerational transmission of inequality and the mechanisms that underlie it The next section considers the impact of various policy interventions that are directed at reducing inequality The final section addresses the challenges of combining household level data potentially from multiple sources such as surveys and administrative records and aggregate data to study inequality and explores ways to make survey data more comparable with national income accounts data
