

Key Findings

1. The availability of standards-aligned English language arts instructional materials continues to increase.

EdReports has reviewed more than 90% of the known comprehensive K–12 English language arts materials market.

Of the core English language arts materials EdReports has reviewed, 51% meet expectations for standards alignment, 32% partially meet expectations for alignment, and 17% do not meet expectations for alignment. For foundational skills programs, which are not comprehensive core products but are designed to address the reading skills necessary for our youngest learners, only 20% of products meet expectations, 60% partially meet, and 20% do not meet expectations.

Based on our analysis, there are dozens of core, comprehensive programs for districts to choose from that are aligned to college and career-ready standards. This means that districts have more choices than ever before as they seek to match their local priorities with standards-aligned options.
