Homo Cinematicus Andreas Killen, 2017-05-12 In the early decades of the twentieth century two intertwined changes began to shape the direction of German society The baptism of the German film industry took place amid post World War I conditions of political and social breakdown and the cultural vacuum left by collapsing institutions was partially filled by moving images At the same time the emerging human sciences psychiatry neurology sexology eugenics industrial psychology and psychoanalysis began to play an increasingly significant role in setting the terms for the way Germany analyzed itself and the problems it had inherited from its authoritarian past the modernizing process and war Moreover in advancing their professional and social goals these sciences became heavily reliant on motion pictures Situated at the intersection of film studies the history of science and medicine and the history of modern Germany Homo Cinematicus connects the rise of cinema as a social institution to an inquiry into the history of knowledge production in the human sciences Taking its title from a term coined in 1919 by commentator Wilhelm Stapel to identify a new social type that had been created by the emergence of cinema Killen's book explores how a new class of experts in these new disciplines converged on the figure of the homo cinematicus and made him central to many of that era's major narratives and social policy initiatives Killen traces film's use by the human sciences as a tool for producing communicating and popularizing new kinds of knowledge as well as the ways that this alliance was challenged by popular films that interrogated the truth claims of both modern science and scientific cinema In doing so Homo Cinematicus endeavors to move beyond the divide between scientific and popular film examining their historical coexistence and coevolution
