

New Forms of Work Organization and Employee Involvement in Two Case Study Sites: Plural, Mixed and Protean

John F. Geary

University of Warwick

This article critically examines the introduction of new forms of work organization and employee involvement in two American electronics companies operating in the Republic of Ireland. The success of these initiatives was found to be intimately related to three factors: management commitment, workers' response and operational pressures. It was found that a number of different forms of labour regulation existed side-by-side within the same organization. This paper tries to account for the persistence of these 'older' forms of labour regulation. In addition, it is argued that workers remain suspicious of, and removed from, management.

Introduction

At present the industrial relations landscape would seem to be marked with little else but untenable positions, places fit only to retreat from. And this is true of both trade unions and employers. Management has endeavoured to dispense with an adversarial approach to employee relations and instead adopt more consensual forms of labour regulation. The 'old' unionism has had to concede that the ground it once occupied is moving fast from under its feet. Commentators speak of the need for or, indeed, the existence of, a new industrial relations, a movement from compliance to consent, the adoption of human resource management techniques and a new realism among trade unions (for example Bassett, 1986). In this varied literature new economic pressures are ascribed a talismanic presence. The new industrial relations (NIR) and human resource management (HRM) bespeak of a renewed effort and concern among employers to survive in the face of an austere economic environment.

Managing and Developing New Forms of Work Organisation George Kanawaty, 1981

New Forms of Work Organization in Europe Peter Grootings, Bjørn Gustavsen, Lajos Hächthy, A remarkable development in the sociology of work in recent years has been the explosion of brilliant cross national and cross cultural studies in Europe examining the conditions of labor against the background of different economic systems and differences within each of the major free market mixed welfare and planned economic systems that dot the European landscape In Vienna and Budapest in particular a group of intellectual workers have gotten together for what can only be described as breakthrough studies in the conditions and purposes of work in post industrial society The question of new forms of work organization focuses on job satisfaction participatory democracy in the work place levels of productivity and issues of health and safety in the occupational environment That these elements are important have long been known But what this collection of studies emphasizes is the specific mix that produced specific outcomes It does not shy away from dangerous and tough questions worker control and control of workers political participation in contexts of authoritarian regimes and personal rewards in contexts that once frowned upon private acquisition of capital The volume is rich in empirical studies and draws the theoretical implications that can and already have had vast policy consequences for workers in the modern context Issues relating to job rotation enrichment enlargement and autonomy and others related to new forms of organization starting with the shop floor and extending throughout the management of the enterprise as a whole are dealt with candidly The social character of labor long frowned upon as a mechanism for evading bread and butter issues is now recognized East and West as a dimension of concern that is growing precisely as the size and character of the labor sector is diminishing This is must reading for those interested in new forms of social and policy synthesis and ways of meliorating competing claims of different sectors in modern societies

Globalisation, New and Emerging Technologies, and Sustainable Development Jesper Lindgaard Christensen, Birgitte Gregersen, Jacob Rubæk Holm, Edward Lorenz, 2021-05-03 This book explores the capacity of the Danish innovation system to respond to key societal challenges including the green imperative of achieving growth with environmental sustainability and the need to adapt to new and possibly disruptive changes in technology often referred to as the Fourth Industrial Revolution The book is divided into four main parts The first describes the evolving characteristics of the Danish system of research and innovation with special attention to the role of policy at the national and regional levels The second part focuses on interorganisational relations including the position of Danish firms in national and global value chains The third part examines changes in labour markets and in the educational and training system and it considers the impact of new technologies including robotics and artificial intelligence on employment and skills The fourth part turns to issues of climate change and environmental sustainability including an assessment of the Danish economy's success in meeting the challenges of the UN Sustainable Development Goals The book will be of particular interest to small countries of which the Danish innovation system is representative but it also appeals more broadly to an audience interested in innovation systems and policies to support economic development

Flexible Working and Organisational Change Bram Peper, J. van Doorne-Huiskes, Laura den Dulk, 2005-01-01 The central aim of this book is to consider to what extent changes in organisations and in the nature of jobs are compatible with the need increasingly expressed by employees for greater integration between work and family life The book questions what sort of dilemmas modern and future employees face in terms of shaping their careers and organising their lives at home The authors formulate answers to these problematic questions by shedding light on relevant developments in the European labour markets the European workplaces in flexible working patterns changing preferences for working hours and in gender relations at work web aug 1 2012 classical solutions in quantum field theory solitons and instantons in high energy physics e weinberg published 1 august 2012 physics 1 introduction 2 one dimensional solitons 3 solitons in more dimensions vortices and strings 4 some topology 5 magnetic monopoles with u 1 charges 6 magnetic monopoles in larger weinberg qft problem 2 1 transformation of quantum states - Feb 14 2023

web jun 21 2020 weinberg qft problem 2 1 transformation of quantum states asked 3 years 4 months ago modified 3 years 4 months ago viewed 250 times 5 i m solving the following problem in weinberg s qft textbook an observer sees a particle of spin 1 and mass m move with momentum p in the y direction and spin z component σ lectures on quantum mechanics cambridge university press - Jun 18 2023

web beginning with a review of the history of quantum mechanics and an account of classic solutions of the schrödinger equation before quantum mechanics is developed in a modern hilbert space approach weinberg uses his remarkable expertise to elucidate topics such as bloch waves and band structure the wigner eckart theorem magic numbers

weinberg solutions quantum - Jul 19 2023

web quantum physics and theory presenting the fundamental knowledge and gradually moving on to applications including atomic nuclear and solid state physics as well as modern subfields such as quantum chaos and quantum entanglement the book starts with basic quantum problems which do not classical solutions in quantum field theory semantic scholar - Jun 06 2022

web classical solutions play an important role in quantum field theory high energy physics and cosmology real time soliton solutions give rise to particles such as magnetic monopoles and extended structures such as domain walls and cosmic strings that have implications for the cosmology of the early universe
