

The Golden Ladder

It's just a golden ladder, that I'm climbing round by round;
And as I climb this ladder, there's one thing that I've found.
The first round gets me started takes my feet from off the earth,
Changes me from going sideways, and I'll call this the new birth.
Then the second takes me higher, steady grip, I step once more,
Reach above, and go up higher. Higher, higher than before.
At my feet are my short-comings. Sins galore, they make me sad.
But I'm bound to raise above them; That's the thought that makes me glad.
On this round it's Love thy neighbor, giving cheer to every man,
Criticisms left behind me, doing good where 'ere I can,
Shouting to a weary brother as he tarries on the way;
Steady brother, do not falter; we may finish this today.
There is pleasure in this climbing, there's a strength to dare and do.
There's sunshine in the lining of the cloud that chills me through.
But the top of this ladder leans against my Father's Throne,
And the last round of the ladder leads me safely into Home.
