Aggression in Children and Youth R.M. Kaplan,2013-06-29 Human aggression is a fascinating research topic but it is of much more than academic importance To a large extent the quality of life and perhaps even world survival depend on an adequate understanding of human aggression Family violence child battering and spouse abuse rape assault armed robbery murder terrorism and war are all instances of various types of aggression The ability to regulate and control such acts could have a crucial contribution to the improvement of the quality of life Aggressive acts in children and youth need to be understood for three major reasons First most Western cultures are witnessing an increasing involvement in violence by youths Second the aggressive dispositions formed early in life may set the tone for or contribute to adult aggression Third the quality of childhood and the formation of personality are influenced by both the expression and inhibition of aggression The regulation and control of aggression in children and youth can have a profound effect on the institutions of the family and the educational system as well as on society at large Most societies are dedicated to maintaining harmony and to providing nonviolent solutions to human problems and social conflict A substantial amount of knowledge has accumulated about aggression and its regulation from empirical research theory and clinical sources Because of the social importance of aggression the study of human aggression in children and youth has become a popular area for scientific research

Handbook of Aggressive and Destructive Behavior in Psychiatric Patients Robert T. Ammerman,Michel Hersen,L.A. Sisson,2012-12-06 Scarcely a day passes without the media detailing some form of human aggression whether it be on its grandest scale in the form of war random bombings and shootings in the streets torture in a prison camp murder by gangs wife abuse resulting in the murder of the husband or the physical abuse of children sometimes resulting in their death Frequently perpetrators of human aggression when arrested and tried in court resort to a psychiatric defense But are all such aggressors indeed appropriately psychiatric patients And if so what are their particular diagnoses and how do these relate to aggression Also of concern is aggression directed against self as evidenced in the rising incidence of suicide among young people or the self mutilation of patients suffering from certain personality disorders Both violence directed outward and aggression toward oneself pose considerable challenges to clinical management whether in the therapist's office or in the inpatient unit Although we have not been able to find successful deterrents to aggression a sizeable body of evidence does exist certainly of a descriptive nature Such data for psychiatric patients are scattered however and can be found in literatures as diverse as the biological ethological epidemiological legal philosophical psychological psychiatric and crimi
