Second International Handbook of Educational Leadership and Administration Kenneth A. Leithwood, P. Hallinger, 2012-12-06 The first International Handbook of Educational Leadership and Administration Leithwood et al was published in 1996 and quickly became something of a best seller for reference works within education Such success we suggest was at least partly due to the unprecedented global waves of concern for improving schools launched in the mid 1980 s combined with a widespread belief in leadership as the single most powerful contribution to such improvement The roots of this belief can be found in evidence produced by the early effective schools research although there is a romance with leadership as an explanation for success in many non school enterprises as well During the two year period during which this current handbook was being written activity in the realms of school leadership school improvement and leadership development gained further momentum The English government created its new National College of School Leadership and several Asian nations announced new initiatives in leadership selection preparation and development

often raises the issue of lack of employability amongst graduate students at both levels undergraduate and post graduate. Victoria of the Financial Times reported that the unemployment rate for graduates was 31 per cent, 23 per cent for workers with a postgraduate qualification and 64 per cent for non graduates. Number of scholars also concur to the notion that new graduates lack the needed skills to make them employable. The core issue of students employability lies in the needed skills and abilities relevant to employers in various industries. This essay discusses this issue and suggests number of approaches and strategies to improve viability and employability of new graduates.

International Comparisons of China's Technical and Vocational Education and Training System Zhenyi Guo, Stephen Lamb, 2010-07-03 China is experiencing an unprecedented phenomenon breakneck industrialization on a scale and at a pace not seen before. It is trying to achieve in just a few decades what Western nations took more than a century to do. The arrival in the country's cities of tens of millions of rural dwellers at most semi skilled has put huge strain on the country's system of vocational education known as TVET. How have the Chinese authorities and their education administrators responded? Is China's TVET system adapting to the rapidly evolving needs of its industry? Using the province of Yunnan as a subject this detailed case study is a closely argued and sanguine analysis of the operation of TVET in China. The authors deployed a set of internationally comparable criteria to offer a searching assessment of current performance at the same time documenting areas of strength and weakness. The question the authors methodology answers is how well China's TVET system is performing compared to technical and vocational education structures in other countries. In fact they discover that in Yunnan a province representative of the challenges faced nationwide much has indeed been done from a wholesale overhaul of programs to make them relevant to industry requirements to major investment in infrastructure. Teacher training has been reformed and take up of professional master's and doctoral courses has been encouraged. Joint initiatives with bodies such as UNESCO have improved training and vocational education at high school level. While there is a strong international history of such comparative evaluations which are essential for policy makers to benchmark their administration few studies have included China despite the enormous amount of value that can be learned from that country's experience. This work will provide vital material for researchers governments and development agencies alike.

Reconsidering Resilience in Education Adeela Ahmed Shafi, Tristan Middleton, Richard Millican, Sian Templeton, 2020-09-03 This book explores the concept of resilience and its significance in responding to a rapid and ever changing globalised world whilst critiquing its buzzword status in contemporary times. Drawing on research from a range of educational settings the book demonstrates that the resilience of individuals and their surrounding systems should not be viewed in isolation and that the interplay between individual resilience community resilience and resilient societies is complex and symbiotic. On this basis it illustrates that efforts to promote resilience would benefit from a systems approach capable of coping with this complexity. Using the ideas of agency and the power of self determinism a development of Bronfenbrenner's bio ecological model is presented to illustrate the complexity of their interplay Existing models of resilience are developed with the book offering the Dynamic Interactive Model of Resilience DIMoR as a way to analyse and support resilience which moves beyond a reductionist descriptive and fashionable presentation of resilience

Measuring University Internationalization Catherine Yuan Gao,2019-08-07 This book investigates university internationalization in different national contexts and compares internationalization performance across national boundaries Internationalization has been recognised by policymakers as the key to perform successfully within the new global context the author identifies primary motivations for universities to embrace this agenda and deconstructs the phenomenon into measurable dimensions and components Using extensive qualitative data from university leaders and practitioners this book analyses the global forces that shape the international education landscape and reviews the existing instruments for measuring internationalization In doing so the author proposes an integrated understanding of university internationalization and indicates benchmarks that can help to quantify and measure this phenomenon This book will be of interest and value to students and scholars of university internationalization

Indicators in Perspective Wouter van den Berghe,1997 Indicators are used in quite different ways in vocational education and training from control and accountability to performance and quality purposes A classification model has been proposed in which many indicators can fit It is based on two important dimensions of indicators 1 the message relating to the information content meaning and signification of the indicator and 2 the purpose relating to the function and use of the indicator Four main areas on the scale for the message dimension are as follows exclusively descriptive management and policy performance and quality Three areas on the scale for the purpose dimension are indicators used for analysis used for communication and with a normative purpose The two main driving forces for the use of indicators are public authorities and institutions International and European achievements in the work on quality indicators are illustrated by the following the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development s INES Indicators of National Education System project the Eurostat key data and the European Training Foundation key indicators on vocational education and training VET At the level of VET institutions a wide range of performance and quality indicators have been developed across Europe in the Netherlands Italy Portugal Denmark and Western Australia The advantages of using quality indicators can be achieved only if 10 conditions 5 design requirements and 5 requirements for processing and use are met Appendixes contain 77 references design methodology for quality indicators and glossary YLB
