Mechanics And Meaning In Architecture:

Mechanics and Meaning in Architecture Lance LaVine, 2001 In Mechanics and Meaning in Architecture Lance LaVine shows that in architecture as practiced and taught today the technological aspect of the profession how weight is distributed how heat flow is regulated and how light is permitted to enter has been ceded to engineers and other technical specialists And in doing so he argues architects have lost sight of one of architecture's most important purposes that of providing a literal and figurative window onto the world As a technology of habitation architecture should give people both a practical and a metaphorical understanding of their relationship with nature For LaVine this knowledge emanates from a sensual understanding of the natural world as a felt force At its most basic level architecture demands an understanding of and response to the natural forces of gravity climate and sunlight At the center of Mechanics and Meaning in Architecture are case studies of four very different houses a Finnish log farmhouse from the nineteenth century Charles Moore's house in Orinda California Tadao Ando's Wall House in Japan and Le Corbusier's Villa Savoye near Paris Through his imaginative readings of structures LaVine highlights how the architects involved have used the oldest and most fundamental architectural technologies walls floors ceilings columns beams and windows in ways that offer creative responses to the natural world and humanity's place in it Clearly architects are comfortable with the practical and aesthetic components of their profession With this book Lance LaVine encourages them also to understand what makes their use of technology unique and essential and to reclaim the natural world for meaningful interpretation in their design of buildings

Architecture, Mentalities and Meaning Patrick Malone, 2017-06-14 In order to function architectural theory and practice must be shaped to suit current cultural economic and political forces Thus architecture embodies reductive logic that conditions the treatment of human and social processes which raises the question of how to define objectivity for architectural mentalities that must conform to a set of immediate conditions This book focuses on meaning and on the physical and mental processes that define life in built environments The potential to draw knowledge from aesthetics psychology political economy philosophy geography and sociology is offset by the fact that architectural logic is inevitably reductive cultural socio-economic and political However despite the duty to conform it is argued that the treatment of human processes and the understanding of architectural mentalities can benefit from interdisciplinary linkages small freedoms and cracks in a system of imperatives that can yield the means of greater objectivity This is valuable reading for students and researchers interested in architectural theory as a working reality and in the relationships between architecture and other fields
