Media Diversity Mara Einstein, 2003-09-12 Media Diversity Economics Ownership and the FCC provides a detailed analysis of the regulation of diversity and its impact on the structure and practices within the broadcast television industry As deregulation is quickly changing the media landscape this volume puts the changing structure of the industry into perspective through the use of an insider s point of view to examine how policy and programming get made Author Mara Einstein blends her industry experience and academic expertise to examine diversity as a media policy suggesting that it has been ineffective and is potentially outdated as study after study has found diversity regulations to be wanting In addition to reviewing diversity research on the impact of minority ownership regulation of cable and DBS duopolies ownership of multiple networks and cross ownership of media on program content Einstein considers the financial interest and syndication rules as a case study due to their profound effects on the structure of the television industry She also poses questions from an economic perspective on why the FCC regulates structure rather than content Through the presentation of her research results she argues persuasively that the consolidation of the media industry does not affect the diversity of entertainment programming a conclusion with broad ramifications for all media and for future research about media monopolies This volume serves as a defining work in its examination of the intersection of regulation and economics with media content It is appropriate as a supplemental text in courses on communication policy broadcast economic and media management broadcast programming political economy of the mass media and media criticism at the advanced and graduate level It is also likely to interest broadcast professionals media policymakers communication lawyers and academics It is a must read for all who are interested in the media monopoly debate

Media Diversity in South Africa Julie Reid, 2021-12-30 This timely book argues that the Global North's research methods and traditional assumptions are not valid to the media landscapes and audiences of the Global South With South Africa as the focus the authors offer a new understanding of media diversity along an audience centred approach

Disappointingly research shows that most South African citizens most of whom are economically marginalised are found to experience extremely low levels of media content diversity in their personal media diets The contributing factors are inter related and complex but include the inequitable distribution of media content a lack of African language media and most especially the cost of media access which is unaffordable to many In this book the authors examine what went wrong with post apartheid attempts to democratise the media landscape and why the experienced levels of media diversity by the majority South African audience remain so woefully low While media diversity is usually measured by policymakers sector stakeholders or by market related imperatives this book foregrounds the perspective of the media consumer In doing so traditional media measuring is inverted leading to a more in depth understanding of how ordinary people in the Global South receive media content how much and why The authors offer a holistic analysis of the ineffectuality of key media policymaking processes projects and institutions while also suggesting how these could be transformed to create a more diverse and broadly accessible media landscape
