New Lives for Old Margaret Mead,1975 When Margaret Mead first studied the Manus Islanders of New Guinea in 1928 they were living with a Stone Age technology Economically vulnerable and burdened by a complex moral code the Manus seemed ill equipped to handle the massive impact that World War II had on their secluded world But a unique set of circumstances allowed the Manus to adapt swiftly to the twentieth century and their experience led Mead to develop a revolutionary theory of cultural transformation one that favors rapid over piecemeal change As relevant today as it was a half century ago New Lives for Old is an optimistic examination of one society that chose to change offering hope and a valuable model for today s developing societies This edition prepared for the centennial of Mead s birth features introductions by Stewart Brand and Mead s daughter Mary Catherine Bateson Margaret Mead Elesha J. Coffman,2021-01-14 For 50 years Margaret Mead told Americans how cultures worked and Americans listened While serving as a curator at the American Museum of Natural History and as a professor of anthropology at Columbia University she published dozens of books and hundreds of articles scholarly and popular on topics ranging from adolescence to atomic energy Polynesian kinship networks to kindergarten national morale to marijuana At her death in 1978 she was the most famous anthropologist in the world and one of the best known women in America She had amply achieved her goal as she described it to an interviewer in 1975 To have lived long enough to be of some use As befits her prominence Mead has had many biographers but there is a curious hole at the center of these accounts Mead s faith Margaret Mead A Twentieth Century Faith introduces a side of its subject that few people know It re narrates her life and reinterprets her work highlighting religious concerns Following Mead s lead it ranges across areas that are typically kept academically distinct anthropology gender studies intellectual history church history and theology It is a portrait of a mind at work pursuing a unique vision of the good of the world

Perspectives in Developmental Change Art Gallaher Jr.,2014-07-15 In this volume a number of distinguished social scientists representing the disciplines of anthropology sociology psychology economics and political science explore essential problems of developmental change against the theoretical background and empirical data of their own and related disciplines Developmental change is here viewed under a broad perspective The considerations range from the problems that arise when human beings are confronted by change to investment planning and decision making in a specific case against a background of general poverty and a high birthrate to the problem of what it is that constitutes development In the concluding essay it is argued that the concerns of developmental change override the boundaries of existing disciplines and professions and demand the close cooperation of both the academic researcher and the field worker The book contains valuable suggestions for all who are responsible for development planning and policy Big Brains and the Human

Superorganism Niccolo Leo Caldararo, 2017-09-05 This book examines why humans have big brains what big brains enable us to do and how specialized brains are associated with eusociality in animals It explores why brains expanded so slowly and then why they stopped growing This book whittles down the theories on brain size evolution to a few that represent testable hypotheses to identify logical and practical explanations for the phenomenon At the core of this book is data derived from original previously unpublished research on brain size in a number of social mammals This data supports the idea that evolution of the brain in humans is the result of social interaction This book also traces the products of the social brain ideology religion urban life housing and learning and adapting to dense complex social interactions It uniquely compares brain evolution in social animals across the animal kingdom and examines the nature of the human brain and its evolution within the social and historical context of complex human social structures Description and Comparison in Cultural

Anthropology Alfred Harris, 2018-02-06 The Lewis Henry Morgan Lectures are intended to commemorate both the man and his work the latter being viewed as having provided an admirably broad and substantial base for anthropologists of later generations to build upon as they have done and continue to do in diverse ways Professor Goodenough's work in the past and in this book particularly emphasizes the vitality and fruitfulness of Morgan's contributions Not only do these lectures carry forward Morgan's interests in kinship they reflect as well his concern for comparative studies undertaken with the aim of ultimately understanding mankind Moreover Professor Goodenough has elucidated recent developments in the collection analysis and presentation of cultural data in ways that make it easier for all of us to see how his methods in themselves specialized can broaden and deepen our understanding of culture and of man Morgan himself a pioneer in method would surely have been an attentive auditor and discussant at Professor Goodenough's Lectures and in his seminars and the less formal events in which he participated while at Rochester and to which he contributed so much This volume is an expanded version of the Lewis Henry Morgan Lectures delivered at the University of Rochester April 2 to 11 1968 Alfred Harris was a professor emeritus of anthropology at the University of Rochester He served as the chair of the anthropology from 1964 1971 and he was well known for being the editor of the Lewis Henry Morgan Lectures Socialization as Cultural
