Rise And Fall Of The Preb Box:

Choctaws and Missionaries in Mississippi, 1818-1918 Clara Sue Kidwell, 1997-02-01 The present day Choctaw communities in central Mississippi are a tribute to the ability of the Indian people both to adapt to new situations and to find refuge against the outside world through their uniqueness Clara Sue Kidwell whose great great grandparents migrated from Mississippi to Indian Territory along the Trail of Tears in 1830 here tells the story of those Choctaws who chose not to move but to stay behind in Mississippi As Kidwell shows their story is closely interwoven with that of the missionaries who established the first missions in the area in 1818 While the U S government sought to civilize Indians through the agency of Christianity many Choctaw tribal leaders in turn demanded education from Christian missionaries The missionaries allied themselves with these leaders mostly mixed bloods in so doing the alienated themselves from the full blood elements of the tribe and thus failed to achieve widespread Christian conversion and education Their failure contributed to the growing arguments in Congress and by Mississippi citizens that the Choctaws should be move to the West and their territory opened to white settlement The missionaries did establish literacy among the Choctaws however with ironic consequences Although the Treaty of Dancing Rabbit Creek in 1830 compelled the Choctaws to move west its fourteenth article provided that those who wanted to remain in Mississippi could claim land as individuals and stay in the state as private citizens The claims were largely denied and those who remained were often driven from their lands by white buyers yet the Choctaws maintained their communities by clustering around the few men who did get title to lands by maintaining traditional customs and by continuing to speak the Choctaw language Now Christian missionaries offered the Indian communities a vehicle for survival rather than assimilation

HIV drug resistance World Health Organization, 2024-03-01 This brief report summarizes recent information on HIV drug resistance HIVDR in the era of integrase strand transfer inhibitors INSTI for HIV prevention and treatment In this report WHO documents high levels of HIV viral load suppression 90% in populations receiving dolutegravir DTG containing antiretroviral therapy ART However recent observational data reveal that HIVDR to DTG is emerging at levels exceeding those observed in clinical trials Few countries have reported people not achieving viral suppression while receiving DTG containing ART However amongst the surveys reported levels of DTG resistance ranged from 3.9% to 8.6% with levels as high as 19.6% observed among highly treatment experienced people who transitioned to a DTG containing ART while having high HIV viral loads Levels of observed DTG resistance in real world populations receiving ART appear to be higher than anticipated from clinical trials WHO recommends that countries routinely implement standardised surveillance of HIVDR to follow the prevalence and patterns of resistance among people not achieving suppressed viral load The use of long acting cabotegravir CAB LA for pre exposure prophylaxis PrEP greatly reduces the risk of acquiring HIV However INSTI resistance has been observed in some cases with recent CAB LA exposure and delayed detection and confirmation of HIV infection can increase the risk of selection of INSTI drug resistance associated mutations

Despite the possible risk the roll out of CAB LA for PrEP should not be hindered Scale up of PrEP should be accompanied by standardized surveillance of drug resistance among people testing positive for HIV while receiving PrEP
