School Dress Codes and Uniform Policies

by Wendell Anderson

Opinions abound on what students should wear to class. But it's not only the fashion mavens who express strong feelings about clothing. School-board members, school administrators, teachers, parents, and students also enter the debate.

Some people believe that requiring students in school settings to conform to a dress code improves student behavior, reduces differences among socioeconomic levels, and enhances students' self-confidence.

Others say that policies stipulating dress codes or requiring school uniforms infringe upon students' First Amendment rights, stifle individuality, and impose unnecessary means of control.

The argument over school dress codes and school-uniform policies continues to rage in the meeting rooms, administrative offices, and classrooms of public schools throughout the country. Two fundamental questions fan the fires of debate:

- Are restrictive dress codes a sound idea in a society that, theoretically at least, celebrates diversity over uniformity?
- Do dress codes and school-uniform policies decrease school violence and increase performance?

Divided Camps

Although the research data don't show an absolutely clear link between dress and students' behavior or performance, anecdotal evidence—and certainly many people's perceptions—generally support some type of dress code in elementary, middle, and high schools, according to one camp's view.

The idea of school uniforms also appeals to many parents and teachers, especially in elementary and middle schools. Uniforms "are seen as a concrete and visible means of restoring order to the classrooms. Uniforms conjure up visions of parochial schools, which are perceived as safe, secure, and orderly learning environments" (Education Week 2001).

VIEWPOINT

"This [dress code] has been something we've been working on for five years now. We didn't have a big problem before. We're just being more rigid about it."

—Patricia Pitt, assistant principal, Old Mill Senior High School, Millersville, Maryland
