

A close-up photograph of a longarm quilting machine. The machine's arm, which is a long, light-colored metal beam, extends from the left side of the frame. It is positioned over a piece of quilted fabric that features a prominent red and white geometric pattern, possibly a star or a chevron. The fabric is held taut by a series of black straps or bands. The machine's head, which houses the needle and foot, is visible on the right side, positioned over the fabric. The background is a plain, light-colored wall.
