The Dead Line Gaspar Christopher Clemens, 1894

Music and Society in Early Modern England Christopher Marsh, 2013-05-02 Comprehensive lavishly illustrated survey of English popular music during the early modern period Accompanied by specially commissioned recordings

James and Jacqueline Anton Wills-Eve, 2013-12-05 Brentfield Academy for young ladies was one of those old English Schools built around 1910 to cater for the education of the daughters of the aristocracy and the rich who recognised that girls were potentially just as clever as boys Their mothers would have supported the aims if not the means of the suffragette movement and their fathers would have gone along with their wives both for a quiet life and because frankly they were totally apathetic about the whole question of sexual equality It was quite close to a leading boys school which was only two miles away in South West London In the following Spring by which time the current sixth formers would have left and be at university the school was going to be celebrating its centenary Like many leading schools it was divided into four houses both for academic and sporting purposes Each was named after a British female monarch Mary Elizabeth Anne and Victoria The head girl that year was Helena Clarke who therefore was not allowed to be a house captain as well As it happened the four house captains and the head girl had all been very close friends for several years although in different houses But the most important thing they had in common was that all of them were earmarked for places at Oxford or Cambridge Helena was a maths genius and also very good at music She was hoping for Cambridge Jennifer Tremayne captain of Mary House also wanted to get to Cambridge to read neuroscience but at a different college to Helena The other three house captains were hoping for Oxford colleges Sylvia Johnson of Elizabeth to read modern languages Gillian Watson of Anne to read classics and Anne McFarland the oldest one of Victoria to read geology All were also senior prefects in charge of school discipline but none of them bothered to enforce the purely venial school rules too seriously More serious misdemeanours were discussed when they had an official meeting each Monday lunchtime That week in mid October they had two serious problems to deal with One concerned a girl in Jennifer s house and one in Gillian s Helena Jennifer began I really don t know what to do about Pauline A Court the captain of the under16s hockey team this year No fewer than four very embarrassed and scared members of the team have spoken to me in the past week In all four cases Pauline seems to be making lesbian overtures to them and in one case rather unpleasantly The head girl looked very worried Well if there is a blessing attached to any of this Jen it s that it s happening in your house You are by far the best suited among us to deal with it Of the five of us you ve got the most sensible and level head on your shoulders and you re certainly the most emotionally stable to deal with it If it had been Sylve s house she would just have threatened Pauline with a night out with Justin All five laughed out loud at this but even Sylvia was concerned at the serious side Jen as I see it you ve only got one option Ask Pauline if it s true and if it is tell her to pack it up Give her a week but don t tell her who has spoken to you If during this time any of the four girls report another incident or when you talk to them after a week they infer that it s still going on then you ll have to take it to Miss Tarrant This sort of thing is what the headmistress is here to handle and in our centenary year it is the one sort of scandal which we cannot have in the school Shouldn t you have a word with her too Hel The head girl looked doubtful No I think Jen should deal with it first and then if things haven t improved we ll go to the head together Is that all right with you Jen Jennifer looked resigned but agreed She asked Gillian and Anne what they would do and as everyone thought the same they left it there The problem in Gillian s house was more straightforward but probably more difficult for girls of 17 and 18 to deal with A fourteen

Ann Vertel, PhD, author of Take Charge of Your Confidence. Ontological

Categories Jan Westerhoff, 2005-11-10. The concept of an ontological category is central to metaphysics. Metaphysicians argue about which category an object should be assigned to, whether one category can be reduced to another one, or whether there might be different, equally adequate systems of categorization. Answers to these questions presuppose a clear understanding of what precisely an ontological category is, an issue which is rarely addressed. Jan Westerhoff presents the first in-depth analysis both of the use made of ontological categories in the metaphysical literature and of various attempts at defining them. He also develops a new theory of ontological categories which implies that there will be no unique system and that the ontological category an object belongs to is not an essential property of that object. Systems of ontological categories are structures imposed on the world rather than reflections of a deep metaphysical reality already present. All metaphysicians should find Westerhoff's book highly stimulating. A Perfect Marriage Laurey Bright, 2012-07-16. Broken Vows. To their friends, family, and neighbors, Celine and Max Archer had a perfect marriage. Only the Archers knew they'd never been in love, and that nights of passion were few and far between. Still, both thought the other happy with the dry-eyed deal they'd made instead of vows. Until Max broke the bargain by wanting more. And suddenly, after twelve peaceful years, the perfect marriage was over. But when Celine realized how much she loved her husband, was it too late to get him back? For unbeknownst to Max, they'd been blessed with a new beginning.
