The Limits of Orientalism

Seventeenth Century Representations of India challenges the recent postcolonial readings of European predominantly English representations of India in the seventeenth century Following Edward Said's discourse of Orientalism most postcolonial analyses of the seventeenth century representations of India argue that the natives are represented as barbaric or exotic others imagining these representations as products of colonial ideology Such approaches tend to offer a homogeneous idea of the native and usually equate it with the term Indian Sapra however argues that instead of representing all natives as barbaric others the English drew parallels especially between themselves and the Mughal aristocracy associating with them as partners in trade and potential allies in war While the Muslims are from the outset largely portrayed as highly civilized and cultured early European writers tended to be more conflicted with Hindus their first highly negative views undergoing a transformation that brings into question any straightforward Orientalist reading of the texts and anticipates the complexity of later representations of the indigenous peoples of the sub continent Sapra's theoretical and methodological approach is influenced by such writers as Aijaz Ahmad and Denis Porter who have highlighted powerful alternatives to Said's discourse of Orientalism Sapra historicizes European representations of the indigenous to draw attention to the contrasting approaches of the Portuguese the Dutch and the English in relation to seventeenth century India effectively undermining comfortable notions of a homogenous West Unlike the Portuguese for whom the idea of a dynasty and the conversion of heathens went hand in hand with the idea of trade for the Dutch and the English the primary consideration was commercial In keeping with the commercial approach of the English East India Company most English travelers instead of representing the Muslims as barbaric others highlight the compatibility between the two cultures and consistently praise the Mughal empire for its religious tolerance In the representations of the Hindus Sapra demonstrates that most writers even while denigrating the Hindu religion appreciate the civilized society of the Hindus Moreover in the representations of sati or widow burning a distinction needs to be made between the patriarchal and the Orientalist points of views which are at variance with each other The tension between the patriarchal and the Orientalist positions challenges Gayatri Chakravorty Spivak's analysis of sati in Can the Subaltern Speak which has become the standard model for most postcolonial appraisals of European representations of sati The book highlights the lacuna in postcolonial readings by providing access to selections of commonly unavailable early modern writings by Thomas Roe Edward Terry Henry Lord Thomas Coryate Alexander Hamilton and other the records of the East India Company which makes the book vital for students of theory European and South Asian history and Renaissance literatures Published by University of Delaware Press Distributed worldwide by Rutgers University Press Rogue Lawyer
