Redesigning Education:

Redesigning Education Kenneth Geddes Wilson, Bennett Daviss, 1994 Argues that American education is out of step with today's world offers advice on redesigning the educational infrastructure and looks at reform case studies Five Pillars of the Mind: Redesigning Education to Suit the Brain Tracey Tokuhamma-Espinosa, 2019-03-05 From the author of Neuromyths a revolutionary look at teaching and learning via the logical pathways of the brain A review of the research on brain networks reveals surprisingly that there are just five basic pillars through which all learning takes place Symbols Patterns Order Categories and Relationships Dr Tokuhamma Espinosa proposes that redesigning school curriculum around these five pillars whether to augment or replace traditional subject categories could enable students to develop the transdisciplinary problem solving skills that are often touted as the ultimate goal of education Heralding a potential paradigm shift in education Five Pillars of the Mind explores how aligning instruction with the brain's natural design might just be the key to improving students learning outcomes Redesigning Education Innovation Unit For Gelp, Global Education Leaders' Program. Innovation Unit, 2013 As we hurtle through the second decade of the 21st century the pressure for radical change to mainstream education is becoming ever more urgent and images for what that future might look like are emerging and coalescing But there is a problem There is no version of this complex exciting new world of learning that can arrive fully operational and ready to open for business on Monday morning Redesigning Education captures the journeys of cities and countries around the world as they travel from the education systems they have to the education systems they want and need and highlights the tools and processes they are using along the way The Global Education Leaders Program or GELP is a partnership of teams of education system leaders and world class organizations collaborating to transform education Its members include some of the highest performing countries in the world and those where providing education for all is an extraordinary challenge As a community these teams have developed refined and shared a compelling and critically actionable vision for the future of education Education 3.0 Redesigning Education is about what it takes to transform education systems when the context in which they've flourished fundamentally alters While a fully operational 21st century education system does not yet exist GELP teams are identifying a clear set of models and practices that together form a roadmap to the future backed up by the practical lessons drawn from their experiences More than simply a compelling case for change Redesigning Education offers real insights grown from stories of system transformation around the globe

Redesigning Schools Joseph P. McDonald,1996-11-22 For five years McDonald charted the progress of ten schools in the Coalition of Essential Schools as they immersed themselves in the hard work of school reform He also visited many other schools both elementary and secondary in an attempt to understand serious school reform and its prospects He concludes that school reform requires redesign in three critical areas The first is a shift in the ordinary and often tacit beliefs of the people who work in schools the communities that support them and even the children who attend them The second area which McDonald dubs the wiring arena involves internal communication and power arrangements The third area called tuning involves connecting the school to the needs interests and values of the communities it serves
