The Teacher Educational Leadership language English abstract: Education is changing worldwide. The literature suggests that teachers need reflective professional development (PD) to effectively teach to the new standards and to demonstrate change to their current instructional practices. This mixed-method, multiple case study investigated the impact of a reflective professional development PD in early schoolteachers' instructional practices. Teachers were asked to maintain Reflective Portfolios for a period of one month in which they were supposed to discuss one incident daily under the light of Gibbs' reflective cycle.

REPORT rubric based on Danielson's framework of teaching was used to assess the portfolios. The teachers were also analyzed via semi structured interviews using qualitative coding scheme. Case descriptions were written and all the collected data was used to explain the levels of reflection in teachers' instructional practices.

increasing number of educators are arguing for conceptually sound reflective or inquiry oriented teacher education programs. The argument is based on the fact that reflective teaching is possible and the belief that teachers should develop habits of consciously informed action. Those who promote reflective teaching argue for teacher empowerment within a self-renewing profession. Reflective Teacher Education offers case studies from seven universities that have organized teacher education programs around the concept of reflection. The cases represent public and private institutions and alternative and traditional models of teacher preparation. The studies represent efforts to transform the entire professional education component rather than individual courses or isolated strategies. The volume also considers reflection as a conceptual orientation commenting on its power to inform and improve teacher education and assessing the implementation of reflection in these specific programs. The six critiques raise intriguing questions about the possibility and desirability of reflective reform efforts by viewing the cases from varying perspectives: development, cognitive, feminist, social reconstructionist, and post-modern.
