Afforestation in Arid Zones R.N. Kaul, 2012-12-06 The increasing world population is already causing intensive pressure on the most productive areas of the earth s surface Hopes of improved living standards if realised will increase the pressure still further The need to make better use of less productive areas thus becomes an urgent priority for human endeavour In this respect the arid and semi arid regions of the world occupying about 11 000 million acres or 4 500 million hectares roughly one third of the total land surface pose a constant challenge to man s technological skill Though the possibilities of economic use of the real deserts are inherently limited there remain vast areas with less extreme conditions where sustained research is capable of yielding substantial gains in productivity The problem is so large that it can be solved only by the coordinated efforts of workers in many countries and many disciplines Forestry has a special part to play not only for its potential value for wood production but still more for the beneficial effects of shelter from desiccating winds which so commonly accompany arid conditions Mr KA UL is to be congratulated on his initiative to pool the results of research on afforestation in arid zones in many parts of the world and to present them in a single volume in the form of separate monographs Forest management and the impact on water resources García Chevesich, Pablo, Neary, Daniel G., Scott, David F., Benyon, Richard G., Reyna, Teresa, 2017-04-24 Trees have been around for more than 370 million years and today there are about 80 thousand species of them occupying 3.5 billion hectares worldwide including 250 million ha of commercial plantations. While forests can provide tremendous environmental, social and economic benefits to nations, they also affect the hydrologic cycle in different ways. As the demand for water grows and local precipitation patterns change due to global warming, plantation forestry has encountered an increasing number of water-related conflicts worldwide. This document provides a country-by-country summary of the current state of knowledge on the relationship between forest management and water resources. Based on available research publications, the Editor in Chief of this document contacted local scientists from countries where the impact of forest management on water resources is an issue, inviting them to submit a chapter.

Neem: Today and in the New Millennium Opende Koul, Seema Wahab, 2007-05-08 The chemicals from plant sources, generally termed as phytochemicals, play an important role in acceptance or rejection of the plant by the pests, as they could be distasteful or toxic on one hand, or on the other hand, specialist herbivores have the capability to feed on many such chemicals as they are able to process these natural products in a manner that is beneficial to them. In the wake of increasing environmental degradation due to burgeoning synthetic chemicals, there has been a process going on to rediscover the usefulness of plants and herbs, and a continued effort for more than 2 decades has been to study the green products for cures for several ailments and pest management. In fact, according to Indian Medicinal Plants: A Sectoral Study, the global trade for medicinal plants amounts to about US $60 billion, and the world demand continues to grow at the rate of 7 per cent per annum. Although many such plants are known in literature, neem has been one of the trees with manifold virtues. Indian neem tree, Azadirachta indica A. Juss., which is a large evergreen tree, is an outstanding example among plants that has been subject matter of numerous scientific studies concerning its utilization in medicine, industry and agriculture. So far, neem preparations have been evaluated against more than 500 species of insects, and more than 400 are reported to be susceptible at different concentrations.
