

"Choosing more where words fail is an advantage in expressing what one means or imagines." —Gao Kingjian, Harvard University Graduate

In December 2006, Gao Kingjian became the first Chinese-language writer to win the Nobel Prize in Literature. In addition to having produced an impressive body of work in several genres—fiction, plays, and essays—this prolific writer has also distinguished himself as a painter.

A collection of more than a hundred paintings, Between a Painting was first published in Peking for a major exhibition of his work in Beijing. The paintings—done ink on rice paper—span the writer's career from the 1960s until the present day. This book also includes an important essay by Gao, who is considered an genius innovator in his native China, both in the visual arts and in literature.

"A reason to painting is a reason to document, a reason to communicate, to an existence full of life, as life itself. It's a reason to the present moment, the eternal present moment. . . . A reason to painting is a reason to humanity, to the fragile individual. The human, after all, have all been hard-wired by fate. . . . A reason to painting means to paint where one cannot paint, to paint what one has already painted, and to begin painting more." —from Between a Painting

Born in 1940 in Jiangxi province in eastern China, Gao Kingjian grew up in Beijing, where he studied and embarked on a life in letters and the visual arts. Choosing exile in 1987, he settled in Paris, where he completed the novels Red Mountain and One Man's Bible.

The Settlement of International Cultural Heritage Disputes Alessandro Chechi, 2014 The past forty years have seen a wide proliferation of an extensive range of disputes under international law concerning cultural heritage These disputes can concern a disparate variety of issues A substantial number of have concerned the restitution of stolen and illegally exported art objects Another set of controversies has involved the protection of immovable cultural heritage Unlike other fields of international law international cultural heritage law does not have an ad hoc mechanism of dispute settlement As a result controversies are to be settled through negotiation or if this fails through existing dispute resolution means which include arbitration and litigation before domestic courts or international tribunals This ad hoc fashion of dealing with disputes is not without consequences The most serious problem is that the same or similar cases may be settled in different ways thereby bringing about an incoherent and fragmentary enforcement of the law This book offers a comprehensive and innovative analysis of the settlement of cultural heritage disputes It addresses the means the potential fragmentation can be resolved by providing a two fold analysis First it provides a detailed analysis of the existing legal framework and the available means of judicial and non judicial dispute settlement Second it explores the feasibility of two solutions for overcoming the lack of a specialized forum The first potential solution is the establishment of a new international court The second concerns existing judicial and extra judicial fora and means of increasing interaction between them by the practice of cross fertilization The book focuses on the substance of such interaction and identifies a number of culturally sensitive parameters which need to apply the common rules of adjudication Ultimately the book argues that existing judicial and non judicial fora should adopt a cross fertilizing perspective to use and disseminate jurisprudence containing these common rules of adjudication to enhance the effectiveness and coherence of their decision making processes Finally it sets out how such an approach would be conducive to the development of a wider body of international cultural heritage law Vanguard ,1984 True to Life Lawrence Weschler,2009-01-26 Soon after the book s publication in 1982 artist David Hockney read Lawrence Weschler s Seeing Is Forgetting the Name of the Thing One Sees A Life of Contemporary Artist Robert Irwin and invited Weschler to his studio to discuss it initiating a series of engrossing dialogues gathered here for the first time Weschler chronicles Hockney s protean production and speculations including his scenic designs for opera his homemade xerographic prints his exploration of physics in relation to Chinese landscape painting his investigations into optical devices his taking up of watercolor and then his spectacular return to oil painting around 2005 with a series of landscapes of the East Yorkshire countryside of his youth These conversations provide an astonishing record of what has been Hockney s grand endeavor nothing less than an exploration of the structure of seeing itself Cyr Graded Art Readers Ellen M.
