

Some Newly-Discovered Contemporary Reviews of Gissing's Early Novels

MARKUS NEACEY
Berlin and Forfar

In his George Gissing, The Definitive Bibliography (2005), Pierre Coustillas lists thirteen known reviews of Gissing's first novel, Workers in the Dawn, all dating from 1880. Twelve of these had been previously recorded in Gissing, The Critical Heritage (1972), four being printed in that volume. By January 1977 (see The Gissing Newsletter of that date) an extremely negative review by Annie Besant in the National Reformer had been discovered. Bouwe Postmus added one more review to the list which he found in the Examiner of 17 July 1880 (see April 2010 issue of The Gissing Journal). I have now discovered two further contemporary reviews of the novel from 1880 and 1881 taking the number of known reviews up to sixteen. Although Gissing was of the opinion (admittedly because he was not aware of a good many of them), and later scholars too, that Workers in the Dawn had received scarcely any notice in the press upon publication owing to Remington's lack of interest in advertising the novel, it seems now that the novel actually received tolerable recognition on its appearance. After all, sixteen reviews is a decent number for a first novel (by comparison 10 years later New Grub Street received thirty-two), and one can assume that there are still more waiting to be discovered in the coming years.

Of the two newly-found reviews, the most unexpected discovery is the unsigned lengthy one from the Western Morning News of 30 May 1881 which appeared almost exactly a year after Workers in the Dawn was originally published. The same review was reprinted in the Rutland Echo and Leicestershire Advertiser on 4 June 1881, a fact which suggests it was published in other regional newspapers around that date. The Western Morning News is a daily regional newspaper still in existence today. It was founded in 1860 by William Saunders (1823-1895), a Liberal Party politician, vice-president of the temperance society United Kingdom Alliance, and radical member of the London County Council in later years, and Edward Spender (1834-1878), a young liberal-minded journalist and champion of the temperance movement. According to the latter's great-grandson, Barney Spender,

Edward Spender saw the potential for a daily newspaper in the regions, immediately able to report what was going on in London; in Parliament, in the courts, in the heart of the nation. To this day Spenders have been good at spotting openings and ideas, less good at following them through, lacking perhaps the business savvy to make them work. If Edward was like that, then he was also lucky. His sister Caroline had married

Westminster Review, 1898 The Independent Review Edward Jenks, 1905 George Gissing Pierre Coustillas, Collin Partridge, 2013-06-17 The Critical Heritage gathers together a large body of critical sources on major figures in literature. Each volume presents contemporary responses to a writer's work enabling students and researchers to read for themselves for example comments on early performances of Shakespeare's plays or reactions to the first publication of Jane Austen's novels. The carefully selected sources range from landmark essays in the history of criticism to journalism and contemporary opinion and little published documentary material such as letters and diaries. Significant pieces of criticism from later periods are also included in order to demonstrate the fluctuations in an author's reputation. Each volume contains an introduction to the writer's published works, a selected bibliography and an index of works, authors and subjects. The Collected Critical Heritage set will be available as a set of 68 volumes and the series will also be available in mini sets selected by period in slipcase boxes and as individual volumes. The American Review of Reviews Albert Shaw, 1917 The Saturday Review of Politics, Literature, Science, Art, and Finance, 1916 Austin Harrison and the English Review Martha S. Vogeler, 2008 Political and literary journalist Austin Harrison became editor of the English Review in 1910. While holding that chair he expanded the publication's literary scope by publishing articles on such issues as women's suffrage, parliamentary reform, the German threat and Irish home rule. But although he edited the Review far longer than did its celebrated founder Ford Madox Ford, history has long confined him to the shadows of not only his predecessor but also his father the English Positivist Frederic Harrison. This first scholarly assessment of Harrison's tenure at the English Review from 1910 to 1923 shows him courting controversy, establishing reputations, winning and losing authors and pushing the limits of the publishable as he made his Great Adult Review the most consistently intelligent and challenging monthly of its day. Martha Vogeler offers a compelling personal and family narrative and a new perspective on British literary culture and political journalism in the years just before, during and after the First World War. Vogeler provides a revealing account of Harrison the editor, his writings and opinions, his public life and relations as she also traces the complex relationship between a son and his famous father. Balancing a scholar's attention to detail and a fine writer's eye for style, she relates Harrison's improbable friendships with the notorious Frank Harris and the outrageous Aleister Crowley. And she has mined Harrison's correspondence to lend insight into the careers of such writers as Ford Madox Ford, D. H. Lawrence, H. G. Wells, Joseph Conrad, John Masefield, Bernard Shaw, Arnold Bennett and Marie Stopes. Other figures such as George Gissing, Bertrand Russell, Lord Northcliffe and important Irish revolutionaries appear in new contexts. Ranging widely across literature, foreign relations, national politics, the women's movement, censorship and sexuality, Vogeler captures the themes of Harrison's era. She describes his transformation from Germanophobe before and during World War I to an outspoken critic of the punitive measures against Germany in the Treaty of Versailles She explores the ambiguities in his engagement with modernist aesthetics and in his attempt to escape the shadow of his father while benefiting from his family's wealth and connections Vogeler's assessment of Harrison's books further sharpens our understanding of his ideas about Germany women education and Victorian family life notably his underappreciated tribute rebuke to his father Frederic Harrison Thoughts and Memories This account of Austin Harrison's career allows us to observe a journalist making his way in a highly competitive world and opens up a new window on Britain in the era of the Great War
