Satisfaction And Happiness:

Global Report on Student Well-Being Alex C. Michalos, 1991-01-09 What makes people satisfied or happy with their lives or with particular features of their lives In his attempt to answer these questions the author has applied his Multiple Discrepancies Theory to study the satisfaction and happiness of university undergraduates in 39 countries The project aims to explain global satisfaction and happiness as well as satisfaction in 12 domains health finances family relations paid employment friendships housing living partner recreation activity religion self esteem transportation and education The forthcoming volumes of this survey will present detailed analysis for every domain country and university for whole groups males and females The four volume set presents a thorough picture of the relative satisfaction and happiness of students in the world

Happiness and the Limits of Satisfaction Deal W. Hudson, 1995-12-27 In classical and medieval times happiness was defined as well being a notion that included moral goodness Today happiness is most often defined as well feeling and identified with subjective states such as satisfaction and peace of mind Deal Hudson argues that the prevailing view is dangerous in politics as well as ethics creating individuals with no other sense of obligation than finding personal satisfaction regardless of the moral and spiritual cost to themselves and others Hudson calls for a return to the classical tradition no one should be called happy who cannot also be called morally good However a contemporary version of happiness should also go beyond the classical notion by making room in the happy life for suffering and passion Using the history of the idea of happiness as a backdrop to a critique of contemporary views Hudson examines happiness from philosophical religious psychological sociological literary and political points of view for example he shows how the tension between the two definitions of happiness is at the heart of the Declaration of Independence The result is an excellent overview of the history of an idea as well as a compelling argument for moral and political change in our time satisfaction are central objectives to most people's wellbeing in life. Recently they have become key concerns for a range of disciplines including psychology, sociology, economics, public policy, and neuroscience. Although happiness is an expression of subjective wellbeing, there are in fact certain common traits among happy people which can be learned and applied by individuals for the betterment of society in general. What makes Australians happy and what roles do they think relationships, wealth, health, and the government should play in promoting and maintaining happiness? This book examines the measurement of happiness and life satisfaction and presents diverse information and advice on ways to increase happiness and wellbeing.

Econometrics of Money and Happiness in India T. Lakshmanasamy, 2023-01-01 This book quantitatively analyses the puzzle between money and happiness in India both at individual and aggregate levels and at cross section time series and panel levels. The relevance of the Easterlin Paradox, a positive income-happiness relationship at a point in time but a lack of association between income and life satisfaction at the aggregate level and over time, and hence economic growth does not improve the human lot, is evaluated. Using data for a long period of 24 years over 1990 to 2014 from the World Values Surveys, the cross-country analysis of the happiness literature is replicated with cross-states analysis applying robust econometric techniques. The effects of individual absolute income, variously defined relative income measures, NSDP per capita, social comparison, social capital, and income inequality on individual average and aggregate happiness and life satisfaction levels across states and over time are examined. The rigorous econometric results validate the Easterlin Paradox in India in that there is no long-run happiness gain from the income growth and the income effects are not the same for all as the middle income groups do not gain in happiness from the rising average income. Whatever short-run gain in happiness is erased in the long run, partially by the declining social capital and rising income inequality.

Happiness and Life Satisfaction in Central Asia Shoirakhon Nurdinova, 2025-10-31 This book offers the first comprehensive examination of life satisfaction and happiness in Central Asia from an empirical and comparative perspective. Drawing on econometric models, it reveals how economic conditions, gender, culture, and social norms shape subjective wellbeing in Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Tajikistan, Turkmenistan, and Uzbekistan. The findings provide insights into the complex structure of quality of life in a region that has received little attention in happiness research. As such, the book makes a pioneering contribution to the study of wellbeing in Central Asia and serves as a valuable resource for scholars, policymakers, and researchers interested in happiness-oriented development and the determinants of wellbeing worldwide.
