

Commedia Dell'arte

- The material was divided into acts and scenes with a prologue
- The situation (scenario) had been clearly determined and outlined, although the actors improvised the dialogue and the action to some extent
- The performances created the impression of spontaneity because the behavior of the actors was quite unexpected by the other actors on the stage
- The actor was the "heart" and the emphasis of the play
- There were few scenarios which were tragic, melodramatic, musical, and most of them were comic, revolving around love affairs, intrigues, disguises and others
- Many actors were required to record appropriate sentiments from poetry and popular literature
