Avian Models for Social Cohesion Andras Csillag, Gergely Zachar, Giorgio Vallortigara, 2020-02-10 Animals living in groups are often linked to group or family members stronger than to other conspecifics and form stronger coalitions often based on genetic relatedness within such groups Effective cooperation within a group requires the preference for proximity of group members suppression of aggression toward conspecifics an ability to perceive and respond to social signals and to change often synchronize behavior accordingly Birds have long been used for a number of investigations involving sensory perception learning feeding strategies and vocal communication Recently they have been proposed as ideal model species even for psychiatric disorders affecting social cohesion such as autism spectrum disorder The physiological mechanisms and neural systems underlying different forms of sociability sexual and parental bonding group preference nesting care for offspring migration can often be studied easier in birds since their social behavioral repertoire as a taxon but sometimes also as individuals is more diverse than that of mammals By contrast with laboratory rodents birds rely less on olfactory cues Rather they tend to use visual and acoustic signals for social interactions much like humans Comparative approach and evolutionary relevance of studies using avian species have already yielded valuable results in several fields of neuroscience learning and memory imprinting acoustic communication birdsong neurogenesis seasonal changes in the song network With the advent of robust novel methods in molecular biology genomics and proteomics information technology and electronic engineering and also based upon an ever improving battery of behavioral tests avian research in social cohesion has likely gained a new impetus Research on the Adaptation of Foot-and-mouth Disease Virus in Chicks Gamal el Din Zahran,1956 Individual Variation and Responses of Animals to Changing Environments John Cockrem,Edward Narayan,2022-11-15 Behavioural Ecotoxicology Giacomo Dell'Omo,2002-05-22 Behavioural ecotoxicology is an emerging field dealing with the effects of environmental pollutants on the behaviour of animals Behavioural techniques derived from experimental psychology behavioural pharmacology and neurotoxicology are applied to detect and characterise changes in animals living in the environment exposed to various pollutants Behavioural effects are then interpreted in an ecological context considering the long term relevance of these changes at both the individual and population level The Poultry Item ,1918 Everybody's Poultry Magazine ,1915 Iowa Agriculturist ,1929 Poultry Science ,1991 Vol 5 includes a separately paged special issue dated June 1926
