of the Second World War Guy Hartcup's comprehensive study covers the many new weapon systems ranging from guided missiles to chemical weapons that have revolutionised air land and sea warfare and equally important the scientific applications including electronics communications and sensors as well as the ability of the fighting man to handle new equipment As a former official historian to the UK Air Ministry and the Treasury he draws extensively upon official documents now released under the thirty year rule and upon the mass of unclassified material in the public domain covering more recent developments on both sides of the Atlantic He has produced a unique study in which not only the weapons systems and their technology are examined but also the internecine strife between the services each competing for a bigger share of the defence budget and the impact of this and countless political cancellations on new projects The book ends on a timely warning against the dangers of succumbing to what the author calls technophilia reminding us that despite the widespread use of new technological wonders in the Gulf War much of the weaponry used was based on technology going back tens of years
