

A close-up photograph of a pair of elderly, wrinkled hands. The hands are cupped together, holding a small, rectangular piece of torn, off-white paper. The paper has a rough, deckled edge and is positioned horizontally across the palms. On the paper, the words "LONG TERM CARE" are printed in a bold, black, serif font. The background is dark and out of focus, emphasizing the hands and the paper. The lighting is soft, highlighting the texture of the skin and the paper.

Lambert,2004 Illinois is the fifth largest state in the country with 12 4 million people in 2000 the population increased by almost 9% or about one million people in the past decade About 12% of the state s population is age 65 and older 1 5 million people in 2000 By 2025 the Illinois elderly population is expected to increase by over 50% and will be 16 6% of the state s total population Illinois is one of the few states in the country that provides older persons and younger adults who meet the eligibility criteria with state entitlements to home and community based long term care services Both entitlements resulted from court cases that were brought to eliminate waiting lists for services The state funds the Community Care Program for older adults and the Home Services Program for persons with physical disabilities with a combination of state general revenue funds and Medicaid Section 1915 c waiver funds The Community Care Program uses contracted agencies for the provision of homemaker adult day care services and case management services In contrast the Home Services Program s relies primarily on personal assistants whom consumers supervise to provide services According to state officials in 2002 the state had about 3 000 people with developmental disabilities in state operated development centers SODCs 6 500 people in private intermediate care facilities for the mentally retarded ICFs MR and 8 800 people in Section 1915 c Medicaid home and community based services waivers for the developmentally disabled The Continuum of Long-term Care Connie Evashwick,1996 This vital text offers a conceptual framework for creating an ideal integrated continuum of care as well as concrete information about the components of the continuum as they exist today Long Term Care in Florida J. V. Lambert,2004 Florida has the largest proportion of elderly in the nation 2 8 million persons are over age 65 representing 17 6% of its total population The dramatic rise in the number of persons age 65 and over in Florida over the next 20 years estimated to total 26.3% of total population will further stretch the already limited resources of the state. Aware of the pressing demand for long term care services well into the 21 century policymakers in Florida have begun seriously to review options for improving financing and delivery of long term care for the frail elderly and persons with disabilities. Federal and state Medicaid spending in Florida was 2.6 billion in FY2001 and 30.5% of Medicaid spending was for long term care. In FY2001 75.3% of total Medicaid spending was for institutional care. Slightly less than 25% of Medicaid spending was channeled towards home and community based services. Although institutional care dominated Medicaid spending there has been slow but steady expansion of home and community based services funding both through the use of Medicaid's waiver programs as well as significant support through state sources. Among the major issues facing long term care in Florida are the fragmentation of long term care services among state and local agencies, an imbalance in financing that favors institutional care rather than home and community based care, shortage of health care workers and well trained staff throughout the long term care and disparities in availability of services across the state.

Autonomy and Long-term Care George J. Agich, 1993. The realities and misconceptions of long term care and the challenges it presents for the ethics of autonomy are analyzed in this perceptive work. While defending the concept of autonomy the author argues that the standard view of autonomy as non interference and independence has only a limited applicability for long term care. He explains that autonomy should be understood as a comprehensiveness that defines the overall course of a person's life rather than as a way of responding to an isolated situation. Agich distinguishes actual and ideal autonomy and argues that actual autonomy is better revealed in the everyday experiences of long term care than in dramatic conflict ridden paradigm situations such as decisions to institutionalize, to initiate aggressive treatments or to withhold or to withdraw life sustaining treatments. Through a phenomenological analysis of long term care he develops an ethical framework for it by showing how autonomy is actually manifest in certain structural features of the social world of long term care. Throughout this timely work the rich sociological and anthropological literature on aging and long term care is referenced and the practical ethical questions of promoting and enhancing the exercise of autonomy are addressed.

Handbook of Long-Term Care Administration and Policy Cynthia Massie Mara, Laura Olson, 2008-03-27. Attitudes toward long term care contain a strong residue of negativity in today's society and current problems with the system augment such perceptions. Unless dealt with now this will only get worse as the 85 and older crowd is the fastest growing part of the population and the first wave of Baby Boomers is approaching 60. Exploring and delineating
