

A close-up photograph of a pair of elderly, wrinkled hands. The hands are cupped together, holding a small, rectangular piece of torn, off-white paper. The paper has a deckled edge and the words "LONG TERM CARE" printed on it in a bold, black, serif font. The skin on the hands is deeply wrinkled and has a warm, reddish-brown tone. The background is dark and out of focus, showing a wooden surface.

Long Term Care in Florida J. V.

Lambert, 2004 Florida has the largest proportion of elderly in the nation 2.8 million persons are over age 65 representing 17.6% of its total population The dramatic rise in the number of persons age 65 and over in Florida over the next 20 years estimated to total 26.3% of total population will further stretch the already limited resources of the state Aware of the pressing demand for long term care services well into the 21 century policymakers in Florida have begun seriously to review options for improving financing and delivery of long term care for the frail elderly and persons with disabilities Federal and state Medicaid spending in Florida was 2.6 billion in FY2001 and 30.5% of Medicaid spending was for long term care In FY2001 75.3% of total Medicaid spending was for institutional care Slightly less than 25% of Medicaid spending was channeled towards home and community based services Although institutional care dominated Medicaid spending there has been slow but steady expansion of home and community based services funding both through the use of Medicaid's waiver programs as well as significant support through state sources Among the major issues facing long term care in Florida are the fragmentation of long term care services among state and local agencies an imbalance in financing that favors institutional care rather than home and community based care shortage of health care workers and well trained staff throughout the long term care and disparities in availability of services across the state      The Continuum of Long-term Care Connie Evashwick,1996 This vital text offers a conceptual framework for creating an ideal integrated continuum of care as well as concrete information about the components of the continuum as they exist today      Handbook of Long-Term Care Administration and Policy Cynthia Massie Mara,Laura Olson,2008-03-27 Attitudes toward long term care contain a strong residue of negativity in today s society and current problems with the system augment such perceptions Unless dealt with now this will only get worse as the 85 and older crowd is the fastest growing part of the population and the first wave of Baby Boomers is approaching 60 Exploring and delineating
